U. S. STEEL CUTS DIVIDEND RATE AND SALARIES

Labor Wage Scale Not Reduced.

President Hoover announced, shortly after news of the U. S. Steel salary cuts became public, that his policy of wage reductions in industry had not been modified. (Story on page 4.)

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Putting into effect a policy of drastic retrenchment, directors of the United States Steel corporation today reduced the quarterly dividend rate on common stock from $1.75 to $1 and announced a downward revision in the compensation of all officers and salaried employes.

MYRON C. TAYLOR. [A. P. photo.]

The new dividend rate amounts to $4 a year instead of $7 and is the lowest paid in sixteen years.

Wages Remain Unchanged.

No action was taken toward a reduction in the wages of labor, although the subject is known to have been under consideration lately. Officials withheld comment on the possibility of wage readjustment. For the present it was said the existing scale will be maintained and it is still believed possible that given some improvement in business the corporation can avoid a cut. It is said two or three weeks, it is understood, will determine the corporation's course with respect to its wage scales.

Action Generally Expected.

The wage cuts finally come they will affect almost 200,000 employés. There are slightly more than 200,000 on the company's pay roll in 1930, but with operations substantially reduced at present, the number is given now as considerably smaller.

News of a dividend reduction and of the salary readjustment occasioned a surprise in Wall street, the recent decline in earnings having made the action seem inevitable. Many adhering to the belief, however, that the cut would be paid and that the corporation would thus return to its previous policy of paying $5 annually with extra disbursements when the circumstances warranted.

Some comfort was extracted from the fact that the corporation still possesses an undivided surplus of nearly $1 a share.

8 Per Cent Salary Cut Rumored.

No reduction in salaries, it is understood, will be put into effect as soon as the adjustments can be worked out. The proposed cut will be applicable to all salaried employés and will amount to about 10 per cent, it is believed. One rumor is that some of the higher executives will accept greater reductions. President James A. Farrell himself is in this latter category. The exact amount of his salary has never been made public, but it is said to be somewhere between $100,000 and $150,000.

The reduction of the dividend rate affects more than 200,000 stockholders. The stock is owned and traded in throughout the world. The total number of shareholders of the common stock as of June 30 last was given as 208,226, the largest in history. The number of preferred stock numbered 68,291.

Board Issues Statement.

The board's action was announced in the following statement:

"The directors of the United States Steel corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock and a quarterly dividend of $1 per share on its common stock.

"The board also recommended that the reduction of salaries of all officers and other salaried employés be made in varying percentages, depending upon the character of service rendered.

"James C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the steel corporation, presided in the absence of Thomas J. P. Morgan. Besides the chairman, Junius S. Morgan Jr., and Edmund Roberts Jr., were also absent. Edmund Farrell was present.

The Other Directors.

In addition to the absentees, Chairman Taylor and President Farrell, the directors of the corporation are:

James J. Buffington, president and director of the Illinois Steel company; Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner; Thomas P. Baker Jr., chairman of the

PRISON FOR BOY SLAYER; JUDGE RIPS PARENTS

Varner Corry Gets 18 Years in Joliet.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Eighteen years in Joliet prison was the sentence imposed yesterday on 15 year old Varner Corry for the slaying of Policeman Edward Smith last Memorial day in the John Marshall high school. The sentence was pronounced by Judge Joseph Sabath of the Criminal court who "after painful study and consideration of the evidence" said he felt the punishment would satisfy justice and safeguard the interest of society. Corry will be the second youngest prisoner in the history of Joliet prison.

JUDGE SABATH. [Tribune Photo.]

In imposing sentence Judge Sabath delivered a denunciation of the parents of the Corry boy as contributory offenders in that they had not taken from their son the pistol with which he killed Smith. Evidence in the case shows that the gun had previously been stolen by Varner from the office of the high school and had been fired at the policeman who, he surprised the boy in the school swimming pool on a day when the building was closed.

Move for New Trial.

Whether Corry will begin serving his sentence in the near future depends on the outcome of a motion for a new trial, which was made by his attorneys, Samuel Antonow and Ransom Walker, and was set for hearing on Monday morning.

If the motion is granted, it was indicated by the defense, the second trial will be before a jury, and Assistant State's Attorneys Harry Busch and Elmer Holmgren said they would qualify the jurymen for a death verdict.

In the trial just concluded the defense waived a jury and Judge Sabath heard the evidence on July 13 and 14. After two weeks of consideration he yesterday gave the verdict that Corry was guilty of murder.

Defendant's Parents Wince.

Young Corry's parents, Robert and Adeline Corry, winced and hung their heads as the sentence was read.

When finally it was over and the bailiffs were conducting Varner back to his cell, his mother and father stumbled after him with tears in their eyes.

"I'm no cry baby and I've never been a cry baby," calmly asserted the red haired boy who throughout his trial had maintained his phlegmatic attitude. He had blinked once when the court passed sentence. If his emotion was about to betray him, nobody ever knew it, for he was quickly stoical again.

"The judge was fair and kind," Varner mumbled when he was sought out in the office of Warden David Moneypenny in the county jail. "Only I thought I would get about 14 years, or 1 to 14, if I was lucky. But I didn't like to see my parents get blamed so heavily. They didn't have it coming."

Judge's Warning to Parents.

Judge Sabath's condemnation of the mother and father was incorporated in his statement, he declared, that it might stand as a warning to the parents of other boys. Addressing Varner and the elder Corrys, the judge said:

"The court regrets that he cannot administer some punishment on the parents of a 15 year old boy who, knowing that he has wrongfully in his possession and is shooting a revolver, did not first demand to know where it came from and second, to take it from him and return it to the rightful owner.

"If they had fulfilled their duty then Officer Smith would be alive today and you would not be here guilty of murder. They, however, failed and you must pay the penalty of their neglect and your own wilful act in taking the life of Officer Smith.

His Threefold Purpose.

"Your sentence should, and the court hopes will, not only punish you for your crime, but serve as an additional threefold purpose: First, to awaken the parents of today to the responsibilities they owe to the children they bring into the world; second, to warn other boys and young men of the certainty of punishment for crime; third, to forcibly draw attention

Milwaukee, Wis., July 28.—[Special.]—There is now more than $5,000,000 in the Milwaukee city treasury and the city's finances are in "almost perfect" order, W. H. Wendt, deputy controller, announced today.

In addition, Wendt's statement revealed, the city's bank balance will be augmented by several million dollars more this week, since $5,000,000 in extended taxes are due July 31.

The city will not consider its financial condition "perfect," Wendt said, until about five years hence when it is scheduled to be on a total cash basis, paying for all its activities with funds collected the year before.

"The depression has been merely a test of the city's finances," Wendt continued, adding that "under its stress the city has shown that it is financially sound."

Bomb Express Building Twice in Two Nights

Damage estimated at several hundred dollars was caused early today by the explosion of a bomb in the front entrance of a building owned by the American Railway Express company at 612 South Clinton street. Early yesterday a small bomb of the warning type was set off in the rear of the same building.

According to George Smith, building watchman, he was looking out a third story window when the later bomb was tossed from a large sedan. The car contained three or four men, he said.

Seeking a theory to explain the explosion, the police of the Maxwell street station recalled that electricians and carpenters working at the remodeling of the building went on strike last week, but returned Monday. The express company contracts are being carried out under the Landis award.

Another bombing occurred yesterday in the meat market of Joseph Feinberg at 1005 South Paulina street. The blast shattered windows of buildings a considerable distance from the shop. A request for the arrest of a man and a girl who were seen in the vicinity shortly before the explosion was sent out by the police.

A cache of dynamite, presumably stored for future use, was discovered in a vacant lot next to the Standard Casket company building at 729 Milwaukee avenue. A search was started for the owners.

LLOYD GEORGE IS OPERATED ON; KIN AT BEDSIDE

LONDON, July 29 [Wednesday.]—(AP)—David Lloyd George, leader of the Liberal party and former prime minister, was operated on today for a kidney ailment. It was understood that the operation, which was performed in his London home, was successful.

All members of the family arrived at the house over night, and during the operation they sat in a room adjoining the bedroom in which the surgeon worked.

The doctors present included Lord Dawson of Penn, physician-in-ordinary to the king; Dr. Swift Joly, a surgeon who is an expert on haematuria, the ailment with which Lloyd George was afflicted; Dr. Howard Humphries, and Maj. Sir Thomas Carey-Evans, son-in-law of Lloyd George.

The former prime minister's son, Maj. Lloyd George, said the patient had a good night. The operation was generally regarded in medical circles as being serious.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 28.—A plane passed east over Bay Roberts at 7:10 p. m., Newfoundland time. Another plane passed over Cape Freels, easterly tip of St. Mary's bay and about 20 miles west of Cape Race, at 6:30 p. m., Newfoundland time, flying low and heading due east over the Atlantic. Neither could be identified.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Two airplanes, almost duplicates in design, were racing across the Atlantic tonight on non-stop flights to the far eastern rim of Europe. A fiery red ship pointed its nose for Moscow, first stop on a voyage planned to break the eight and two-thirds day round the world record of Post and Gatty, and a black and yellow plane streaked toward Istanbul in an effort to capture the long distance record held by the French.

In the first plane rode Hugh Herndon Jr., wealthy young Princeton university adventurer, and Clyde Pangborn, veteran barnstorming pilot. Bound for Turkey were Russel Boardman and John Polando. Both teams expect to reach their destinations within fifty hours.

Steamers to Keep Watch.

Tonight they were winging their ways along identical routes under moonlight skies.

They were far over the Atlantic before midnight and ships sailing the great north circle kept close watch for the air voyagers. Neither plane is equipped with radio, and the only reports of their progress must come from ships at sea.

Both planes roared off the runway at Floyd Bennett field, the municipal airport, at the first crack of dawn. Boardman and Polando were the first to take the air at 6 o'clock [E. D. T.] in their Bellanca monoplane named Cape Cod. The heavily loaded ship sped along the runway with sparks flying from its tailskid for more than 4,000 feet before it lifted. There were 725 gallons of gasoline and twenty-five gallons of oil in the sturdy ship.

Fights for Altitude.

After porpoising a couple of times the Cape Cod took to the air and headed to sea. When it passed out of view it was flying only fifty feet high and headed toward the south east. Boardman apparently having trouble lifting the heavy ship high enough to make the turn to put him on his course. The 300 horsepower Wright motor, however, never missed a beat and carried the men safely into the sky.

The round the world ship, also a Bellanca but powered with a 425 horsepower Wasp engine, took to the air eighteen minutes later. Burdened with 100 more gallons of fuel than the Cape Cod, the Miss Veedol raced 3,500 feet down the same runway, rose easily, circled the field, dipped its wings in salute and headed out on the great north circle.

At the field when the two planes started was Dr. James H. Kimball, meteorologist and patron saint of the airmen. It was the first Atlantic take-off the weather man had witnessed since Admiral Richard E. Byrd took off for France. Another interested spectator at the field was Giuseppe Bellanca, builder of both planes. He expressed satisfaction with their behavior.

Seek Post and Gatty's Record.

Herndon and Pangborn are both pilots and they will spell one another at the controls in their effort to beat the round the world record of eight days fifteen hours and fifty-one minutes recently set by Post and Gatty. Although they have a slower plane, they plan greatly to reduce the amount of time passed on the ground.

Boardman will pilot the Cape Cod

SHOWERS ARE DUE TO PUT AN END TO HEAT WAVE TODAY

The blistering sun which sent the thermometer in Chicago to 96 degrees at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon will be obscured by clouds and cooling showers this afternoon, according to Forecaster W. P. Day. The wind will also shift to the north and temperatures will drop to the low 80s or high 70s. Tomorrow will be fair with moderate temperature.

Three deaths here yesterday were attributed in part to the heat.

High temperatures were recorded yesterday from California to New England. In the Imperial valley of California, where 40 deaths were reported, a maximum of 120 degrees was recorded. Los Angeles reported a maximum of 93 degrees, while the temperature in some of its suburbs went as high as 108. New York reported a high of 94.

Showers late yesterday over scattered areas in the northwest had a cooling effect and helped crops that had been parched by the heat. Generally cooler weather is promised.

Topic for Family Conference: Today's Furniture Prices

Rarely is a family conference called to discuss the need or advisability of buying such items as pins, matches, carpet tacks, or thread. When such things are needed they are bought without further consultation. They cost so little that it doesn't show up in the budget.

Buying tables, chairs, beds, draperies, and other things for the home is something else again. Furniture runs into money. Such purchases, the experience of the past decade has been, require considerable thought and figuring. Only the wives of the wealthy could feel at liberty to order a lot of new equipment without consulting the income-producing side of the family.

But in lots of homes these days new pieces of furniture have been appearing on the scene unpreceded by the customary powwow. Wives in the course of their regular shopping have come across furniture bargains that couldn't be passed up. Pieces—the purchase of which has been postponed from year to year—are at last being acquired.

The fact of the matter is that furniture prices now have reached levels which will permit the complete refurnishing of a home for a fraction of what it formerly cost. The government says that today's furniture dollar has the power that $1.88 had back in 1920. Now is a good time to have a family conference on the matter.

SCHOOL BOARD CUTS $2,310,565 ON OWN FIGURES

Estimated Saving Is Questioned.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

ROBERT F. CARR.

The board of education by the unanimous vote of the nine trustees present yesterday ordered "estimated savings" —according to its own official reckoning—of $2,310,565. The motion to make the cut was made by Trustee Carr, recently appointed by Mayor Cermak.

The cuts adopted were all of those recommended a week ago by President Myers, except four items totaling $1,309,500. These are: The donation of a week's services by the teachers at an estimated saving of $300,000, a similar donation by other employés amounting to $200,000, the extension of janitors' vacations for two weeks at a saving of $69,000, and the discharge of 45 assistant engineers at $40,000.

The savings, as figured by the school trustees, were apportioned among the school departments as follows: educational, $817,915; law, $27,200, and business, $1,466,350.

Figures Seem Too High.

The board's estimate of savings appears higher than warranted by the financial records. It was estimated that by abolishing autos with chauffeurs for the trustees $30,000 a year would be saved. But it is learned that seven-twelfths of that amount already has been spent and the savings this year cannot be over $12,700 by abolishing the auto service on July 31, as the order specifies.

The board also estimates it will save $46,000 by suspending the activities of the community centers, but that is the total cost for the year. So, the actual saving for this year probably will not exceed $19,167.

The board estimates a saving of $10,000 and another of $13,000 by the discharge of two special assistant attorneys. Again, those figures are the annual salaries of the lawyers, and they will collect for the seven months they have been on the pay roll.

About 20 other items of that character are on the list of "estimated savings" by the board, consequently the actual cut in expense will be considerably less than $2,310,565. One employé "guessed" the amount of $2,050,000.

Items in Savings.

The $817,915 savings figured by the school trustees in the educational department include the following items:

JOBS ABOLISHED.

57 administration assistants	$ 98,000
1 bathroom supervisor	3,500
4 vocational advisers	12,500
1 director of safety	3,500

Business Department Cuts.

The $1,466,350 savings in the business department include the following:

JOBS ABOLISHED.

10 temporary clerks	$14,400
3 temporary assistant inspectors of school property	5,040
2 district supervising engineers	9,240
1 business bureau inspector	3,360
3 temporary laborers	4,500

Salary budget	604,135
Elimination of repairs	136,855
Repairs on entrances	45,000
Refinishing desks	25,000
Painting	107,000

The $27,200 savings under the board's estimate in the law department are made by abolishing three jobs, that of special assistant attorney, held by James Todd, at $10,000 a year; special assistant attorney, held by William Saltiel, at $50 a day, figured at $13,000 a year, and special attorney in tax division, held by Mrs. Elizabeth Fihe, at $4,200 a year.

The city administration estimated the saving from 14 days vacation without pay at $2,400,000, but the supporting details have never been made public. It is thought that this estimate is also too high. However, the city has shown, by a reduction in pay rolls, a cut in salary expense of about $35,000 a month; and the county board has announced it will trim 14 days pay from all employés, beginning Sept. 1 next.

The above gives an impression of the total savings made or contemplated since Gov. Emmerson's revenue commission urged public offices prune expenses, as well as private business, in the present business depression. The aggregate is small in comparison with what members of the governor's commission deemed it prudent to cut.

Promises Additional Cuts.

"But we have made a start," explained Trustee Carr after yesterday's school board meeting, "after considerable procrastination. It was difficult to make progress under the conditions existing. This is only part of the saving which we must make, if we are to get the schools on a sound fiscal basis.

It was the opinion among teachers that the board would get the money within a reasonable time. In all of their speeches on three different occasions there was no suggestion that there might be extreme difficulty in collecting the taxes assessed for 1929 and those to be assessed for 1930 and 1931. The board has been spending this year and last on the theory that it will get 90 per cent of the taxes levied, while less than 65 per cent of the 1929 taxes have been collected so far.

Carr Leads Discussion.

The debate on yesterday's board action was short. Trustee Carr took the lead. "The employés of the board," he said, "must know that we are going through the equivalent of war time conditions. They must make some contribution. They are in bad shape because they have not been paid, but there is a worse thing than not being paid. That is being without work altogether—and we have thousands in that class."

He then suggested that the four items on which he said there was a difference of opinion be deferred. Trustee Savage and Trustee English asked that they be eliminated. Attorney Thomas V. Sullivan had apparently given an opinion to the trustees in a secret meeting before the board session that the department heads could not compel employés to work without pay. Trustees Savage and English had their way.

Trustee Caldwell opposed further the "punishment of teachers, who already are suffering hardships." Instead of making them work without pay, he said he favored a longer Christmas vacation.

Mrs. Hefferan Voices Fears.

Mrs. Hefferan, another trustee, predicted that more serious conditions would follow, and desired holding in abeyance action on working without pay until Sept. 1. She indicated a fear that the schools might have to close for a period.

Several of the trustees explained their votes for the expense reduction. Trustee English thought that some of the cuts might impair the educational service and he asked that the superintendent of schools notify the board of any errors of that kind have been made. Trustee Hemingway said he would not vote to make a breadline, but since the department heads had recommended the cuts he would vote for them.

Teachers Recommend Plan.

The Chicago Teachers' federation, at a meeting yesterday morning, recommended a plan to obtain the eventside salaries for the teachers. They would have private individuals buy the $6,900,000 anticipation warrants issued against the 1930 taxes and held by the surplus funds of the city, and then have the city buy an equal amount of 1931 tax warrants. For the plan the teachers argued that the buyers could use the warrants in six months to pay their 1930 taxes, get interest on the investment in the meantime, and accommodate the school teachers.

The trustees did not discuss the plan, but they did vote to increase the $6,250,000 of tax warrants placed in trust to $10,050,000.

Accept Playground Tract.

The board accepted a gift of approximately eight acres in the Dunham tract, at 49th street and Dorchester avenue, which is to be used as a playground for school children and young people from the surrounding neighborhood. The tract, to be known as the Kenwood Community playground, was the gift of Albert W. Harris, chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank and is to be permanently maintained for playground purposes.

The only expense incurred by the board in the acceptance is the payment of a pro rata share of the cost of removing buildings now on the tract and of paving an extension of Kenwood avenue to 50th street. Frank Righeimer, assistant attorney, told board members the tract was valued at approximately $3,000,000 and the board's share of the expense would not pass $6,000.

The entire tract of 10 acres comprises the historic Dunham cow pasture, representing a portion of the estate of the late John H. Dunham, pioneer Chicagoan. Mr. Harris retained a strip of ground at the extreme west end of the tract, 150 feet deep and adjoining his property and other residences in Kimbark avenue.

REVENUE BOARD PUTS ASSESSORS THROUGH A QUIZ

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Comments by members of Gov. Emmerson's revenue commission, after questioning the board of assessors for three hours last night, indicated they will seek a substitute for personal property taxes. Charles Krutchoff of the state tax commission alone openly advocated an income tax.

"Enforcement of the personal property tax law," said Samuel Insull, a member of the commission, "would result in abrogating it. The personal property tax is impossible of equitable enforcement."

"From what you have told us," said Fred W. Sargent to the assessors, "it appears that the personal property tax should be junked."

Krutchoff Urges Income Tax.

"My experience leads me to believe that the only way you can get at personal property is by an income tax," said Mr. Krutchoff.

"To make an income tax a substitute would require an amendment to the state constitution, would it not?" asked Joseph K. Brittain, chairman of the commission.

"I believe that as soon as you enforce the personal property tax you will get an amendment to the state constitution," commented Ray Wantz of Rockford, another member of the commission.

"The last two proposals to amend the constitution were defeated by those who did not vote, and they largely do not pay personal property taxes," said John Watson, tax expert of the Illinois Agricultural association.

The Condition Downstate.

"Does not that same condition on nonpayment of personal property taxes exist throughout the state?" asked Corporation Counsel Sexton, another member of the revenue commission.

"No such condition as exists in Cook county," replied Mr. Watson.

Mr. Insull suggested another form of taxation "as a relief to real estate, as we were instructed."

It has been reported that the board of assessors will decrease valuations for the 1931 taxes, which are now being spent by the local governments. Mr. Sargent, who was selected as the interrogator for the commission, attempted to ascertain the views of the assessors, for whom John E. Conroy, secretary, answered most of the questions.

Handwriting on the Wall.

"There is a feeling among the taxpayers," said Mr. Sargent, "that they are not getting a dollar's worth of service for each dollar they pay in taxes. Very little worth while reductions are being made in expenses. They are going ahead, spending promiscuously. Will you assessors indicate whether, in your opinion, there will be a material reduction in the valuations for the 1931 taxes, so that the tax spending bodies can know whether they are spending more money than they will receive?"

"They should see the handwriting on the wall," replied Conroy.

"Would you say that it is imperative for the taxing bodies to curtail?"

"They should, without crippling the service."

"You haven't answered Mr. Sargent's questions," said Corporation Counsel Sexton. "Did you not issue a mimeograph statement to all of the newspapers saying there would be a substantial reduction?"

"I am uncertain, but perhaps we made that statement," replied Mr. Conroy.

"A prominent city official told this commission at its first session, if I remember correctly, that the assessors would cut real estate 30 per cent. What is there to that estimate?"

"We have issued no percentages. I talked with City Controler Szymczak, but I never thought it would be published."

"We send out 300,000 schedules," replied Mr. Conroy.

"How many file schedules?" asked Mr. Sargent.

"I can't answer that," said Mr. Conroy.

"How many pay?"

"I cannot answer that."

"We have between 800,000 and 900,000 users of gas and electricity in Chicago," commented Mr. Insull.

"That illustrates the difference between a private and a public official of a large corporation," remarked Mr. Sexton in a stage whisper. "Mr. Insull knows how many families he serves."

"There is some duplication," went on Mr. Insull, "and let us eliminate 25 per cent and say there are 600,000 families in the city who should pay personal property taxes. Now, how many pay?"

"About 40,000 file schedules," answered J. Louis Jacobs, efficiency expert for the county.

"I think you will find that about 10 per cent are assessed and 5 per cent pay," said Mr. Insull.

"What effort do you make to find personal property to assess?" asked Mr. Sargent.

"We leave schedules at the homes," answered Conroy.

"When you come to a big flat building where you cannot get in?" he was asked.

"The deputy inquires of the janitor about the furnishings in the flats and tells the janitor he will not have to file," said Conroy.

The Case of a Factory.

"The deputy, a $6 a day man, reports that it is too big to assess," said Conroy.

"Or a jewelry store?"

"That must be an estimate."

"Cannot employés change the personal property assessment, without the board ever knowing about it?"

"Yes, that can be done, but we have been trying to put a lock on the books."

"Isn't it common gossip that is the way some lawyers take care of their clients?"

"It may be gossip, but I do not know about it."

Mr. Sargent read excerpts from the book of Herbert Simpson of Northwestern university in which he tells of the inequalities found in the real estate assessments.

"It was largely haphazard guess work up to his investigation?" asked Mr. Sargent.

"It was rough estimating," said Conroy. "We had no system up to that time. Each of the five assessors did the valuating in his own district."

Olander Takes Up Questioning.

Conroy made several remarks about Harry Cutmore, the ousted director of appraisals, who installed the present system, and Victor Olander, another member of the revenue commission, took up the questioning.

"When was that system invented?" he asked.

"In 1902 in Minneapolis or St. Paul," replied Charles E. Fox, newly appointed appraiser of the board.

"The City club urged the adoption of that system twenty years ago," said Mr. Olander. "Why didn't the assessors inaugurate it? What are the defects in that system?"

"It has many advantages," said Mr. Fox.

"I wonder why the assessors did not adopt it before," commented Mr. Olander.

Asked about abolishing the board of assessors and substituting one responsible assessor, Mr. Conroy said: "That would be too csarlike."

ACCEPTS WEIGHT OF BRIDE IN WHEAT AS HIS WEDDING FEE

Oakley, Kas., July 28.—(AP)—Wheat instead of rice figured in the wedding of Miss Cleo Wurst and Edgar Smith of Russell Springs.

The ceremony was performed in a wheat field in the shadow of a combine harvester.

J. K. Montgomery, justice of the peace, officiated, and afterward accepted two bushels of wheat—the weight of the bride—as his wedding fee.

TAX COMPLAINT CASES SPEEDED IN REVIEW BOARD

Barrett Promises All Will Be Heard.

Members of the board of review, starting their hearings on objections to 1930 assessments yesterday, speeded up their procedure to an extent which will enable them to handle between 400 and 500 complaints daily, they estimated.

Charles V. Barrett, chairman of the review board, asserted that a full hearing would be given every objector, but he did not explain where the board expected to find time for such hearings.

Even at the maximum rate of 500 cases a day, it will require ninety-two working days to hear the 40,000 objections to assessments on buildings and improvements, and the 6,000 objections to personal property assessments which have been filed. In addition, there are 394 objections to land assessments on file, involving more than 20,000 individual descriptions of property.

Only Two Months' Time.

Officials have estimated that in order to place tax bills in the hands of property owners even a few days before Jan. 1, 1932, the date on which taxes become delinquent, it will be necessary for reviewers to finish their hearings by Oct. 1, only two months away.

"Everyone will get a hearing," Chairman Barrett promised. "We may hold night sessions later on."

Hearings yesterday were speeded up by having each of the three members of the board hear complaints separately. Each complainant was given approximately two minutes to state his case. Only 100 notices were sent out to property owners to appear yesterday, on the assumption that the board would sit en banc in hearing objections. Since three days notice is necessary to summon objectors for hearings, it will be Monday before property owners can be summoned at the increased rate of 500 a day, Andrew W. Gatenbey, chief clerk of the board, stated.

Injunction Is Denied.

Attorneys Ferre C. Watkins and Perry Ten Hoor, representing forty-five members of the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers of Illinois, went before Judge Ross C. Hall in the Superior court yesterday with an amended petition for an injunction restraining the board of review from holding its hearings, on the grounds that the 1930 assessment is illegal, due to the disproportion between assessments on real and personal property.

The bill was dismissed. Judge Hall sustained the objection of County Attorney Hayden N. Bell, based on a recent opinion of the Appellate court, that the tax objectors should seek relief in a court of law. The injunction plea was an equity proceeding.

DRY AGENTS RAID 12 CAFES IN LAKE COUNTY; SEIZE 14

Racing through Lake county last night, fifty prohibition agents raided a dozen cafés and taverns, said to be under the control of George "Bugs" Moran, arrested fourteen bartenders and owners, and seized a quantity of beer, wine, whisky and gin. The prisoners will be arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Walker.

Among the places visited where arrests were made were the Louis Cernocky resort in Fox River Grove; Charlie Waddell's place in Fox River Grove; Hauck's River Front inn; the Tanel Garage inn in Fox Lake; Sheehan's Eagle Point resort; two saloons in Cary; two saloons in McHenry; Ted's café in West McHenry, and Rich's place in Crystal Lake.

Beer was found in all the places raided and liquor in most of them.

BROKER IS DEAD IN HOME FROM INSECT POWDER

Winter Haven, Fla., July 28.—(AP)—Walter Leroy Smith, civic leader and broker, was found dead in his home here tonight, poisoned by insect powder which had been placed in his house while he and his family were in Washington during the last seven weeks.

Smith returned ten days ago in a business trip.

Physicians said he had been dead six hours when his body was found. A coroner's jury decided death was accidental, due to inhaling poisonous fumes from the powder.

Smith for years was secretary to the late "Uncle Joe" Cannon, veteran congressman.

SWANSON ASKED TO PROBE NORTH SHORE PK. BOARD

Resolutions were passed by the Howard District Business association last night requesting State's Attorney Swanson to make an investigation of the North Shore park board and to take appropriate action. At the last election for commissioners Patrick C. Winn and Thomas F. Myers received a plurality of the votes cast but were denied their seats by holdover members of the board, who claimed Winn and Myers were illegally elected. The board is now doing business on the assumption that the opponents of Winn and Myers are rightfully members. Winn died since the election, but friends of Myers still hope to get him on the board.

County Workers May Get Overdue Pay Next Tuesday

County employés will get their pay for the first half of July, now more than a week overdue, next Tuesday if the county board approves payrolls at its meeting Monday, County Treasurer McDonough announced yesterday. Funds for the $500,000 payroll, and also for payment of $372,500 in interest on county bonds which falls due on Aug. 1, were obtained by the sale of 1931 tax anticipation warrants to the $1,000,000 gas tax fund recently turned over to the county by the state treasurer.

BOYS BURIED AS CAVE COLLAPSES; 1 DEAD, 1 RESCUED

Chums Trapped in Hole Dug in Cliff.

Benton Harbor, Mich., July 28.—[Special.]—Two fifteen year old Chicago boys were buried in the collapse of a cave they dug in a cliff at Deerlick creek, on Lake Michigan two miles south of South Haven, Mich., last night.

Michael Schleimer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Schleimer, Sr., 1156 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, is dead.

Heinz Kramer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kramer, 2934 North Racine avenue, Chicago, was taken from the cave unconscious but will survive.

The accident followed a picnic supper and swimming party at the beach. Mrs. Schleimer, mother of the dead boy, later tried to commit suicide by flinging herself in the lake, but her daughter, Margaret, 18, rescued her.

George F. Jillson, track coach and science and mathematics teacher, South Haven, saved young Kremer and recovered Schleimer's body with the assistance of his two little girls and Miss Schleimer, who dug with their hands and with sticks to get to the bodies.

The mother first missed the boys. Jillson and his wife, picnicing nearby, were summoned. Mrs. Jillson drove to the nearest telephone a mile away, summoning coast guards, who with South Haven's fire chief Rudy Welch and his men rushed with shovels to the scene.

Mrs. Schleimer and her family were resorting at the home of Mrs. Anna Sorenson, Monroe boulevard. The Kramer boy was staying with them. Mr. and Mrs. George Kramer, the survivor's parents, came to Michigan today.

CITY ABANDONS PAVING PROJECTS PUT AT $12,184,100

One hundred and fifty-nine street paving projects estimated to cost $12,184,100 have been abandoned by the board of local improvements, President Lindheimer announced yesterday.

High taxes and decreased incomes in many cases have made it a hardship upon property owners to pay special assessments, Mr. Lindheimer said. Another reason for sidetracking the paving jobs, he said, is the belief of the board that paving costs will decrease and that money may be saved by temporarily postponing them.

The projects abandoned represent in number approximately 15 per cent and in money about 20 per cent of all those contemplated. The program of the board, before its revision, contemplated 1,009 projects to cost $55,942,085.

Mr. Lindheimer said that a survey was being made of the cost of paving in other cities. Prices will be compared with those in Chicago, and where the latter are higher, he said, the contracts will be abandoned.

$215,000 SPENT TO PUT CAPONES IN U. S. PRISON

Al in Court Tomorrow to Get Sentence.

The task of putting Al Capone and his brother Ralph in the penitentiary, to which the United States government set itself three years ago, has cost the taxpayers of the United States approximately $215,000, federal agents estimated yesterday.

Neither of the notorious gangsters is behind the bars as yet, but Al's day of judgment is near at hand. He comes up for sentence before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson tomorrow and probably will learn his fate at the conclusion of the day's hearing of evidence. In this event, he probably will be taken to Leavenworth on Friday. Al has pleaded guilty to violations of the income tax laws and conspiracy to violate the dry laws.

Sentenced for Tax Fraud.

Ralph is under sentence of three years for income tax violations, the rap having been upheld by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and is to be tried in September on booze conspiracy charges. His appeal to the Supreme court probably will be disposed of this fall.

Frank Wilson, one of the foremost members of the government intelligence unit, of the bureau of internal revenue, who came here from Washington to aid in the assault on Al Capone, placed the costs of the investigation of Al's income tax case at $50,000. Mr. Wilson did not try to give an itemized account of the expenditures, and other federal agents pointed out the extreme difficulty of arriving at an accurate figure, but an effort was made to divide the costs into general classifications.

Six Men on Case for Year.

Six agents of the intelligence unit, headed by A. P. Madden, worked constantly on the Al Capone case for about a year. Other agents assisted from time to time, their work amounting to that of about four full time investigators for the year. With an average salary of $4,000, this would total $40,000.

For more than two years United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson and his assistants, Dwight H. Green, Jacob Grossman and Samuel Clausen devoted much of their time to directing the Capone investigation. Special Assistant Attorney General William J. Froelich also assisted the prosecutors. It was estimated that the government attorneys' time appropriated that of three prosecutors working steadily on the case for a year with an average salary of $6,000. The grand jury heard witnesses in the Capone case on about thirty days. At a day salary and traveling expenses for the 23 grand jurors this would have been close to $5,000.

Witness Expense $3,000.

Thirty witnesses, exclusive of government agents, were heard by the grand jury, and their fees and expenses, including those of five brought from Miami and one brought twice from Pittsburgh, were estimated at $3,000. Salary and expenses of deputy marshals in serving processes during the investigation were estimated at $3,000.

Six round trips between Washington and Chicago were made by the prosecutors and investigators for conference on the Capone case, which added another $1,000 to the expenses. Agents of the intelligence unit visited Miami, San Diego, and Pittsburgh to interview and bring back witnesses, and the costs of these trips were estimated at $5,000. More than 1,000 persons were questioned by the agents during the investigation.

Adding $5,000 for expenses of the investigators for work around Chicago, $22,000 for miscellaneous expenditures, including salaries of secretaries and stenographers, the total comes $100,000.

Cost of Ralph Capone Case.

The total cost of the investigation against Ralph Capone, which began in July, 1928, and resulted in his indictment in November, 1929, was estimated at $75,000. Three week's trial, which resulted in his conviction in April, 1930, cost approximately $15,000, according to the prosecutors, and Ralph's appeal has already cost the government about $5,000, including the salaries of the prosecutors for their time spent in that connection. Alfred E. Page, special assistant attorney general, was brought here from Washington to assist with the government's brief.

Another $5,000 was added to the costs of prosecuting Ralph to cover miscellaneous expenditures, including the trips of prosecutors to Washington in connection with his effort to compromise his civil tax liability.

Expense in Beer Investigation.

Eight special prohibition agents under W. E. Bennett, with an average salary of $2,300, worked for six months on Al Capone's beer conspiracy investigation. This would total $11,200, and additional expenditures, including expenses of the grand jury, brought the total to approximately $12,000.

The cost of indicting Ralph Capone for conspiracy in connection with his Cicero cabaret ventures was estimated at $3,000.

The government's expenditure of $215,000 to rid Chicago of the Capone brothers, however, was not made without a view to returns. Al alone owes the government $215,000 in taxes, and his penalties and interest will bring the sum to about $400,000. Ralph owes $311,283 in taxes, interest and penalties. Conviction on criminal charges does not preclude the collection of civil liabilities, and the government will collect all it can get from the Capones.

In the booze conspiracy cases, fines of $10,000 may be imposed upon each defendant convicted, and 68 persons were indicted with Al and 17 with Ralph, so that in fines alone the government may realize several times what it expended in its efforts to put the Capones in the penitentiary.

CLAIMS RICH HUSBAND SPENDS HIS MONEY ON RUM, OTHER WOMEN

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Victor A. Searles of Palm Beach, New York, and Atlantic City is seeking appointment of a guardian for her wealthy sportsman husband, charging him with habitual drunkenness and lavishing money on other women.

The charges were brought in an amended bill of complaint filed yesterday in her suit for separate maintenance for herself and their 5 year old daughter. The bill asks $2,000 monthly for Mrs. Searles and the child, Betty.

The complaint sets out that Mrs. Searles is informed that her husband "is now being investigated by the department of justice" and alleges Searles has "been guilty of white slavery in violation of the Mann act," spending thousands of dollars on other women but failing to provide living expenses for his wife and child.

FIND COMPANIES STILL GETTING POLICE AS GUARDS

On Job Despite Ban on Special Details.

The north side plant of the Wieland Dairy company stands at 3640 Broadway. Each day at 1:30 p. m., one of the ten policemen available for patrol duty in the Town Hall district reports at the plant and there stands guard until the last of the dairy wagon drivers have turned in their receipts at 6 p. m.

There is no record of a successful robbery having been committed at the plant. There is a record of 26 robberies and 41 burglaries committed elsewhere in the Town Hall district in the last month, however.

Robert W. Nessler, secretary of the dairy company, said the police guard had been requested two years ago, following several unsuccessful attempts to hold up the Broadway plant.

"We feel that in a plant such as ours, where large sums of money are turned in daily, police protection is necessary," Mr Nessler explained. "Just now we have completed arrangements with the Brinks Express company to store the cash in safes which the Brinks drivers alone can open. No, we don't feel that the employment of a private armed guard is necessary."

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock who, in pursuance of Mayor Cermak's instruction, has issued departmental orders for the abolition of nonessential police details, sent forth a special order yesterday to insure that the detail on the collection cars of the Chicago Rapid Transit company be "continued as usual."

These cars, heavily manned by private guards, make nightly trips along the rapid transit system, picking up cash receipts from the station agents and distributing pay rolls. H. M. Lytle, vice president of the company, asserted that the police details were requested, not for protection of the money chests, but merely to afford the private guards the comforting presence of a policeman in the event of a holdup.

"Our own men are fully capable of protecting the cash," said Mr. Lytle. "But in the event of a holdup, we feel it would be best to have a legally empowered officer present to shoot the bandits. If a robber happened to be shot and killed, then the company would be in the clean."

For the last several months a policeman has been lurking nightly in the shadows opposite the office of former Ald. A. K. Mose, 2859 Devon avenue, waiting to trap the vandals who, on four occasions, have smashed the office windows. The last attack of vandalism, according to Capt. Martin O'Malley, commander of the Summerdale district, occurred six months ago.

"It wasn't six months ago," asserted Mr. Mose. "It was May 16. It's come to such a pass that I can't get breakage insurance any longer. The policeman is there, not to protect the place, but on the chance the vandals will come back again and be caught."

3 YOUTHS DROWNED OFF CHICAGO SHORE, ONE AT WAUKEGAN

Two youths were drowned last evening when they stepped into deep water while wading in the lake off 14th street on the west side of Northerly Island. They were Roscoe Sylvester, 17 years old, 727 South Damen avenue, and Louis Codignoni, 16 years old, 2329 Polk street. Neither could swim. They cried for help and a number of bathers who heard their shouts went toward them, but both sank before assistance could reach them. The bodies were recovered by coast guards under Capt. John O. Anderson.

LOUIS CODIGNONI.

Chester Niemiec, 15 years old, 2416 South Spaulding avenue, was drowned last night near a pier in the lake at 64th street. The body was recovered by the Jackson park coast guards.

Wallace Volts, 18 years old, of Milwaukee, a new hand on the fishing tug Martha of Milwaukee, was drowned early this morning in Waukegan harbor while swimming with two other members of the crew after the boat docked there. Volts had been engaged yesterday by Capt. Edward Tewes of the Martha.

FOUR TAG DAYS OR MORE? ISSUE UP TO COUNCIL

Aldermen Will Decide in Meeting Tomorrow.

The city council at its meeting tomorrow will decide whether to abide by its past policy of restricting tag days to four a year or to let down the bars and authorize other organizations to collect money from the public at street corners.

Two tag day ordinances recommended by the finance committee are awaiting final council action. One would permit the Chicago Babies' Free Milk fund, of which Mrs. W. R. Hearst is honorary president and Mrs. Ernest R. Graham, president, to sell tags on Aug. 15. The other would authorize a forget-me-not flower sale on Sept. 26 by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

Special Ordinance for Vets.

Neither of the organizations is among the four groups designated previously by the council as privileged to hold tag days every year. The disabled veterans, however, have been permitted to hold a separate tag day annually through the passage of a special ordinance each year.

At the last meeting of the council several aldermen, opposed to unrestricted tag days, obtained the passage of a half dozen facetious orders for tag sales as a means of demonstrating to what extremes the thing might be carried. The orders were killed after the discovery that they were for such beneficiaries as ex-King Alfonso, the ex-bartenders' union, the school board, and Tom, Dick, and Harry.

Several aldermen, however, said privately that they feared criticism if they voted against the milk fund and veterans' ordinances. Although generally opposing any more tag days, they admitted their hesitation at opposing the two which are pending.

Other Veterans Oppose Plan.

Letters urging the defeat of the disabled veterans' tag day ordinance were received by members of the council yesterday from the Handicapped Ex-Service Man's league, a new organization of wounded veterans formed following an investigation by the state's attorney into charges of alleged racketeering against several former officials of the Disabled American Veterans last November.

"Past experience," said the letters, "has shown that such tag days constitute an imposition on the public who think they are giving their money for the benefit of disabled soldiers when, as a matter of fact, the greater portion of the same is diverted as expenses or otherwise to the benefit of those who promote the enterprise."

The letters were sent out by Joseph B. Lynch, secretary and treasurer, and Ollie D. Sbultz, recorder, of the Handicapped Ex-Service Man's league.

Quantico, Va., July 28.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler plans to retire on Oct. 1, he definitely announced in accepting a bronze tablet from the Veteran Marine Corps legion last night. His friends said he had purchased a home in Philadelphia and probably would move into it after a lecture tour.

Gangster Guns Miss Target; Hit 5 Children, 1 Killed

New York, July 28.—(AP)—A carload of underworld gunmen drove slowly through a sweltering tenement district tonight, fired a spray of lead and then streaked away, leaving five children wounded, but their intended victim apparently unscathed. One of the children, Michael Vengali, 5, died in a hospital.

Dozens of scantily clad youngsters were on the sidewalk in East 107th street seeking relief from the heat.

A baby lay crying in its carriage. A small boy stood behind a wooden box hawking his home made lemonade. Half a dozen girls were playing tag.

A well dressed man stood a foot back from the sidewalk in a niche between two buildings. He apparently was waiting for some one. No one noticed him and neither was any attention paid to the open touring car which was coming slowly up the street.

Machine Guns Appear.

Suddenly the boy at the lemonade stand screamed and ducked under the box. He had seen the muzzles of five or six machine guns, revolvers and shotguns poked from the car.

The man in the niche cringed and waited. The guns were pointed at him, but between him and the car were the girls, the boy under the lemonade stand and the baby.

Suddenly there was a roar and a volley of lead splattered against the wall of the tenements. Then another and another. Slugs ripped through the box under which the boy hid. Others ploughed through the baby carriage. Still others struck children on the sidewalk.

Parents in second, third, and fourth story windows screamed and ducked. Children unscathed in the first volleys fled, wailing, for shelter. Others stood mute with horror.

Target Seems to Escape.

The car was barely moving. The man in the niche tried to draw himself up into a still smaller target. More shots, more screams and then the marked figure was seen to slump.

An order was barked from the back seat of the touring car and the driver sent it roaring away.

The child in the carriage, Michael Bevilcqua, 3, had stopped his crying. Two of the dozen or more slugs that went through the carriage had lodged in his back.

Small Figures on Sidewalk.

Automobiles and trucks rushed the wounded children to hospitals before their parents could reach them.

Detectives loaded witnesses into patrol wagons and dug forty or more of the lead slugs from the walls of tenement buildings.

Raid Social Club.

A raid was made on the Helmar Social club nearby, and the steward, Michael Martello, taken into custody for questioning. Later police announced they were convinced the man who had been marked for death was Joseph Rao, whose cousin is a vice president of the club. He is said to be an active figure in current beer wars.

Recently, they said, Rao allied himself with Jack [Legs] Diamond and "Dutch" Schultz to war on Vincent Coll, a rival in the beer business. They explained the attempt to "get" Rao apparently was an outcome of that rivalry.

BOOSTS CITY LAW TO KEEP CHECK ON CONTRACTORS

Francis E. Broomell, president of the Citizens' association, yesterday urged the city council to pass the pending ordinance requiring each contractor who does work for the city to keep a uniform system of books and accounts.

In a letter to Ald. John A. Maassen [43th], author of the ordinance, Mr. Broomell said its passage would be "a long step in the direction of cutting down the enormous waste in connection with public contracts."

"By requiring each contractor to keep his records and books in accordance with a uniform system of accounts to be prescribed by the city controller, in such manner as to show in full detail all the disbursements of the money received under the contract and by imposing severe penalties for failure to do so, the ordinance should make available to the taxpayers much information that they are entitled to have for their protection," the letter stated.

Mr. Broomell also commended the provision in the ordinance making it possible for the city to recover by law payments to a contractor violating its provisions.

Pheasant Delivers Itself Dead Into Autoist's Lap

A pheasant dinner was dropped literally out of the air into the lap of W. J. Moore, 1311 Chicago avenue, Evanston, yesterday afternoon. While driving home from Elgin a pheasant cock flew into the windshield of Mr. Moore's car; crashed through the glass and landed in his lap, dead. A trifle disconcerted by sudden appearance of his visitor, Mr. Moore lost control of his car and plunged off the road, into the ditch and out again. When he arrived home a few selected guests were invited to partake of the dinner.

HOOVER INSISTS HIS NO PAY CUT POLICY STANDS

Denies Rumor He Has Modified It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—Reports that the Hoover administration had modified its announced policy of opposing wage reductions, were given official denial at the White House today, following the regular Tuesday cabinet meeting.

WILLIAM N. DOAK. (C) Harris & Ewing.

"No member of the administration in advocating maintenance of wages should be changed. It has not been changed," said the statement.

Coming a day after the publication of a letter written by Secretary of Commerce Lamont to Representative Francis E. Condon of Rhode Island, in which Mr. Lamont declared that some concerns might have to cut wages or close down, the statement was interpreted as an attempt to offset the Lamont letter.

Steel Salary Cut Follows.

It came a short time prior to the receipt of news that the United States Steel directorate had voted, not only to cut dividends from $1.75 to $1 per share of common stock, but also to readjust the salaries of officers and other salaried employés. According to word from New York, the directors' decision does not mean, for the present at least, a reduction in the wages of labor.

On that basis, the administration is counting on chalking a victory; for it is known that President Hoover considered United States Steel a test case. He went so far, it is reported, as to send at least one high departmental official to New York to point the far reaching effect a wage cut in the steel industry would have and to argue strenuously against it.

Secretary of Labor Doak, on coming from the cabinet meeting this morning, was emphatic in denying that the policy on wage reductions had been changed in any way.

Rail Labor Alarmed.

Another development involving wages today was the issuance of a statement by the heads of 21 labor organizations, representing most of the organized railway employés in the United States and Canada. They denounced the injection of the wage question into the freight rate hearings before the interstate commerce commission.

The railroads presented their petition for a 15 per cent rate increase to the commission with the understanding rather widespread that if they did not get it the wages of railway labor would have to be cut.

The heads of the 21 labor organizations, known as the railway labor executives' association, in their reply stated that the commerce commission has no jurisdiction to determine the reasonableness of railway wages.

Deny Wages Are High.

They declared, moreover, that railway wages are not high, that several hundred thousand railway workers have been out of work for more than a year, and many have been working part time for several years, and that the railroads have been able to handle more traffic with fewer men. The roads, they declared, had had a constantly declining labor cost.

"There is a very good reason why well informed railroad executives have not responded to the pressure of outside forces urging wage reductions," the labor leaders said. "The facts will not support such a demand."

U. S. Steel Cuts Dividend and Salaries; Wage Scales Stand

board of the First National bank; William J. Filbert, controller, United States Steel; Samuel Mather, senior partner Pickands, Mather & Co. of Cleveland; Thomas Morrison of Pittsburgh; Walter S. Gifford, president American Telephone and Telegraph company; Davis S. Houston, president Mutual Life Insurance company, and Nathan L. Miller, former governor of New York and general counsel of United States Steel.

Withheld Till Market Closes.

News of the dividend cut was not made public until after the stock market had closed at 3 p. m. Meantime, speculators had withdrawn to the sidelines, and steel stock fluctuated between a high of 92¼ and a low of 91¾. Wall street had anticipated the action for some weeks, however, owing to the drop in earnings of the corporation.

A dispatch from San Francisco—where the market is open later—said the closing price of Steel shares in that market was 87½.

Comparison with previous periods of unsatisfactory earnings for the Steel corporation are difficult, but so far as the records indicate the quarter ended June 30 was the poorest, in point of net profits from operations, since before the world war. If special income items be excluded, the return of the last quarter probably holds a low record that goes back even farther.

The income report for the three months ended June 30 disclosed that, by the addition of a special profit item arising from the sale of the Gary Light, Heat and Water company, the corporation earned in that quarter a net of $7,391,355 for both classes of stock, from which the margin available for common stock dividends was 12 cents a share.

Huge Shrinkage Shown.

This compares with $6,765,057 for the first three months of this year, or the equivalent of 5 cents a share on common, and with $32,126,717, or $8.02 a share on common, in the second three months of 1930. The net before dividends in the first six months of this year was $14,156,412, or 17 cents a share on common, against $67,904,524, or $.46 a share on common, in the same period of last year.

Net earnings in the second quarter, after expenses and reserves for taxes, but before depletion, depreciation and obsolescence, amounted to $13,817,524 as compared with $19,464,888 in the first quarter of this year and with $47,061,304 in the second quarter of last year. The earnings for the first six months of this year, calculated on the same basis, aggregated $33,282,860, against $96,676,701 in the corresponding period of 1930.

A Disappointing Showing.

So far as the income report is concerned, the showing was concededly disappointing to the financial community. Analysis of the statement shows that, excluding the profit realized from the sale of the Gary property, the corporation actually earned from operations a balance of $230,839, or less than 7 cents a share on the 3,602,810 shares of preferred stock outstanding. This result was below Wall street's expectations by a wide margin. The impression had been that the corporation would show operating earnings almost if not fully adequate for preferred dividends.

By paying total dividends of $6,304,919 on preferred and $8,704,292 on common, the corporation authorized the disbursement to stockholders of $14,778,822 more than it earned on its own operations. However, with the special item of profit added, the corporation was able to show a total net for dividends of $7,391,355, and the amount to be taken from undivided surplus is therefore $7,617,856.

Third Dip Into Surplus.

This is the third successive dividend to require a draft on surplus. In the quarter ended March 31 the corporation dipped into surplus to the extent of $14,745,928, and in the quarter ended Dec. 31 to the extent of $9,144,897, so that the total requisition in the three quarters has been more than $31,000,000.

The company's undivided surplus at the end of 1930 was $471,783,758. Subtracting the amount paid in dividends out of surplus in the first and second quarter of this year there remains now a surplus of approximately $449,782,758.

Cash and marketable securities in the company's treasury last Dec. 3 were in excess of $197,000,000.

15,000 TEXTILE WORKERS STRIKE AT PATERSON

A. F. of L. Affiliates Are Back of Move.

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Orders for a general strike of 30,000 workers in the men's and children's clothing industry of New York will go into effect at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, it was announced today by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The objects of the strike, according to union officials, are to prevent a return of sweat shop conditions in the industry and to put an end to gangsters' intimidation of union members and officers.

15,000 in Textile Strike.

Paterson, N. J., July 28.—[Special.]—An exodus of 15,00 workers from the textile mills here locked the wheels of industry today for a strike under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

The strikers under the A. F. of L. affiliates—the Associated Silk workers, the United Textile Workers and the conference for progressive labor action—reported to four district headquarters of the affiliates for the opening day of the strike.

No exact figure of the number of strikers could be made, the leaders of the A. F. of L. affiliates declared, pending a checkup at the different mills.

The A. F. O. L. union had intended originally to strike on Aug. 8, but the radical strike forced the conservative leaders' hands. The strikers pointed out that the seasonal pickup in the silk industry comes at this time of year and that if the strikers can hold out for a few weeks they will be in a good position to enforce their demands for more pay and shorter hours.

Efforts to unite the two groups failed last night at a meeting of 500 members of the two conservative unions, the United Textile Workers and the Associated Silk Workers, at Craftsmen's hall.

He used the money to open a number of small golf courses in Aurora. He was arrested Monday in his apartment in the Maryland hotel, 900 Rush street, by the Chicago police.

Los Angeles, July 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Janet Gattis-McCormick said tonight she will leave tomorrow for Reno, Nev., to seek a divorce from John McCormick, former motion picture producer. The principal reason is, she explained, that McCormick weeps whenever he sees a photograph of his first wife, Colleen Moore of the films. So she charges mental cruelty.

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Kibitzing a barber shop checker game today resulted in a shooting scrape in which one of the players was killed and a bystander was wounded. Carlos Saguil, a barber, and his opponent had reached a stalemate. Advice on his next move caused the opponent to draw a gun and empty it around the shop.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—Loretta Young and Grant Withers, motion picture players, who have a divorce suit pending, today were named co-defendants in five damage suits linked with their elopement to Yuma, Ariz. Two girls and three youths filed the suits, asking a total of $55,000, charging the honeymoon automobile of the screen actors crashed into the car in which they were riding.

Chicago Boy Collapses and Dies in Indiana Lake

William Stewart, 15 years old, 6221 South Lincoln street, died in Cedar lake, near Crown Point, Ind., yesterday, apparently of heart disease. He was helping another youth to pull a boat ashore when he collapsed in the water. An examination of the body showed that William had not drowned.

"CASTE SYSTEM" ON OCEAN LINERS MAY DIE TODAY

Shippers Expect to Wipe Out "Second Class."

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 28.—The total abolition of second class accommodations on trans-Atlantic liners, thus making the ocean safe for democracy, is expected to be voted tomorrow by the North Atlantic conference of shipping agents.

Several weeks ago shipping men discussed the possibilities of drastic reductions in second class passengers which would tend to wipe out the middle deck bourgeoisie, but at today's conference the crafty shippers went much further and decided that henceforth a passenger "for a' that."

The entire problem will be decided tomorrow.

Caste System Dies.

With the second class completely wiped out, a death blow will be struck at the seagoing caste system. All second class quarters will be converted into third class tourist or even jazzed up as a "cabin class." This actually would be equivalent to the prewar first class accommodations. The modern first class accommodations are considered "de luxe."

The distinction in accommodations and prices remains, but the social barrier which kept the two classes on a different plane and on a different deck will be eliminated. The idea apparently is that the cabin class is occupied by those who were bulls in 1929 and the de luxe class is for those who have been bears since, and that they now are all the "right people," despite the whims of fortune.

Indirectly the abolition of the second class will tend to break down the barriers between the first and the tourist third class, which is bohemian and, therefore, considered smart. The straight third class remains what it has been for several years—steerage.

Military Rigidity Wanes.

Already the more than military rigidity which formerly separated the classes has largely been broken down. Tourists on occasion can dine or dance with their wealthier friends without being regarded as hairy apes, and a dollar to a steward is enough to make him wink at a breach in regulations. This was the main reason for the popularity of the tourist third class and for the unpopularity of the second class.

Under the ancient aristocracy of the seas the first class paid to look down on the second class and the second class could take comfort in looking down on the third class, and later when they felt blue they could always watch the stokers. Perhaps from now on any one with a white shirt can crash the gate.

ARLINGTON closes its most successful 1931 season next Saturday with one of the greatest racing cards ever seen on an American track. Over $100,000 will be given away in purses—a record amount for any track in the West. These rich purses have attracted the thoroughbred champions of the East and West—a great many will be at the post in an endeavor to capture a rich prize.

Two outstanding events in seven spectacular races scheduled for Saturday are the Post and Paddock Stakes, the richest two-year-old race ever run in the West, and the Arlington Handicap, which equalizes the horses by weight adjustments to assure closer competition.

Among the stars likely to try for the Post and Paddock Stakes, which should gross over $50,000, are C. V. Whitney's Fall Apple, winner of the Aberdeen and Keene Memorial; M. T. Archibald's Westy Junior, a consistent winner at Arlington; A. B. Letellier's Sazerac; Willard Mack's Sun's Son, winner at Agua Caliente; Victor Emanuel's Morfair; F. A. Carreaud's Va Carriendo; W. R. Coe's Oscillator, and others. It looks like a large field will start for this valuable purse.

The $41,000 Arlington Handicap is expected to attract great handicappers like Sun Beau, Gallant Knight, Sun Meadow, Spinach, The Nut, Mike Hall, and others. Some think that as many as 25 will start in this race.

Don't miss this great final day at Arlington. It is the last opportunity you have for a year to see this racing for sport's sake only. Only Arlington with its non-commercial policy could afford to give these rich purses which attract the greatest thoroughbreds in racing.

It will be a gala day and there is no increase in admission prices.

Rebel Leaders Are Jailed as Terrorists.

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, July 28.—A terrorist plot to overthrow the constitutional government of President Don Francisco Uriburu, which included an aerial bombardment of Buenos Aires, has been uncovered.

Police in an official communique today revealed details of the plot, alleged to have been headed by former President Marcelo T. Alvear. Only a week in the financial arrangements to back Uriburu's rule, police announced, prevented an army of revolutionists from seizing and looting the capital.

Leaders Are Arrested.

The communique declares that the government holds clear proof of the complicity of leading politicians, who have been arrested and placed in solitary confinement.

Among the arrested leaders of the alleged plot to wipe out the provisional government by bloodshed, if necessary, are former President Alvear, who has been ordered deported; Jose Pueyrredon, former ambassador to the United States, and Carlos Noel, former mayor of Buenos Aires.

This again the government claims has suppressed a revolutionary movement of the radical party of former President Hipolito Yrigoyen. The radical party has been making considerable headway, inciting the people against what is termed a military dictatorship, and the public has been slow to respond to the party's "call to" utterances to get rid of Gen. Uriburu, who became provisional president after Yrigoyen's overthrow last fall.

Chile's Exiles Return.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 28. — The capital of Chile has returned to normalcy and business activities have been resumed, though the banks will remain closed until Thursday, following last week's riots, which resulted in the resignation of Dictator Ibanez and the selection of Esteben Montero as provisional president.

It was announced today that the government will call general elections. The diplomatic and consular services will be reduced to two-thirds. Meanwhile several resignations are being received and accepted by the government, including those of Francisco Urrejola, ambassador to Buenos Aires, and Pablo Ramirez, minister to Paris.

Pedro Ramirez, former minister of justice in the Ibanez government, was cited for his drastic measures to save the country from economic distress and it is reported that the government will take special measures before accepting his resignation.

Twenty deported citizens have arrived from their different places of exile, including those confined to the southern isles. This morning José Massa, former senator who was deported to Buenos Aires by former President Ibanez, arrived by plane and announced that former President Alessandri and 30 others, who also were deported, will arrive Friday night.

All professional circles have published guarantees to support the new government, including lawyers, doctors, and teachers who were on a strike as a protest to Ibanez' "iron fisted" regime.

The chief of Ibanez' pet carabineers publicly stated today that the carabineers were not responsible for the deaths which occurred in the street fighting. He added that the shooting was carried out under the orders of superior officers.

The university students today also announced that they never mixed with the communists in an effort to achieve their newly won freedom by engaging the carabineers in pitched battles.

Ibanez in Buenos Aires.

More Color and Speed in Tribune Presses

Workers are sinking caissons which will support unusually heavy foundations to carry eight units of new high speed black and color presses, soon to be installed just north of Tribune Tower. Later on these caissons will help support the north section of Tribune Tower when that big structure is erected.

Evanston Ward Elects Alderman Unanimously

Frederick Wahl, 829 Case street, Evanston, was unanimously elected alderman of the 5th ward yesterday. He fills the place vacated by Ald. John La Bahn, who has a contract with the city which disqualifies him from holding office. Ald. Wahl had no opponent in the special election.

Hiccoughs for 28 Days; Patient's Condition Grave

Physicians at the University hospital were striving yesterday to save the life of Christ Karzes, 53 years old, 4258 West Harrison street, who has been unable to stop hiccoughing for the last 28 days. Dr. Adolph Kraft, who is attending Karzes, says he considers his condition grave.

LAUNCH CAISSON WORK FOR 8 NEW TRIBUNE PRESSES

Diggers Delighted to Be Back on Jobs.

Caisson diggers, several of whom have been without jobs for more than a year, are now cheerfully busy burrowing underground to bedrock for caissons under the heavy foundations which will support eight new units of high speed black and color presses for THE TRIBUNE.

The new caissons will be sunk from ninety to 110 feet below street level. These will help support the foundations of the new north wing of Tribune Tower when that big structure gets under way later on.

One line of presses, just north of Tribune Tower, will be extended east with the addition of these eight units of high speed news presses. All are for black work now, but will be equipped with color units later, so both black and color work can be done on the entire eight units. They will be ready for use by the first of the year. R. C. Wieboldt, Inc., has the general contract.

Jobs Bring Smiles.

Among the men who are being put to work on this job are some who haven't worked for months, and the prospect of steady hard work has brought nothing but smiles to their faces.

"Man, lead me to that job," is the way Michael Morris, 38 years old, 645 West 42d street, a caisson worker, expressed it. "Why, I haven't had more than two days work in a row for over 13 months and I have a family to support. I need work!"

Jack Cook, 42 years old, 882 East 64th street, a structural iron worker, who has been unemployed for 10 months, was also jubilant.

No Time to Loaf.

"Now I can give my daughter, Agnes, some money to buy her lunch with while she's at school," he said. "You see, I had a few dollars saved in the bank, but I've been living off of that for 10 months and it's getting pretty slim.

"Well, there comes the boss and I can't take any chances on losing this job. I got to get to work."

$1 OIL OR TROOPS WILL STOP PUMPING, MURRAY THREATENS

Oklahoma City, July 28.—(AP)—There will be a dollar a barrel price for crude oil by Saturday night or no more production from Oklahoma's great oil field, Gov. William H. Murray said in an ultimatum to petroleum purchasers today.

Counting on the strength of his National Guard as he did in his campaign to open Red river free bridges, Murray said unless oil reaches the price he has set he will order all wells except "stripper" wells, shut down.

"If necessary, we will use the military to enforce the order," he said.

NEGRO RAPIST IS EXECUTED IN TEXAS PRISON

Austin, Tex., July 28.—[Special.]—Will Jenkins, Negro, aged 46, was executed at the state prison at Huntsville early today. He was indicted and tried on the double charge of being a habitual criminal and for the rape of a Negro girl in Houston. He was found guilty on both charges but was sentenced to death only on the rape charge. The habitual criminal act, enacted in 1929, provides that three previous convictions and prison sentences shall constitute habitual criminal status. The penalty on this charge is life imprisonment and not death.

Jenkins had been convicted and served two sentences for burglary and one sentence for rape prior to his last offense.

HOT DOG DEALER PUSHED OFF CAR DIES OF INJURIES

Joseph Sergis, 45, of 421 Center street, a hot dog vender, died at the Alexian Brothers hospital yesterday from injuries suffered July 19 when he was pushed from the running board of an automobile at Center and Howe streets.

Sergis told the Hudson avenue police that he had sold three sandwiches to men in the car. When they started to drive on without paying he stepped on the running board, but one of them pushed him off, and his skull was fractured against the pavement.

SUIT SUGGESTED TO FIX STATUS OF FAIR BUILDINGS

The possibility of a friendly court action between the city and the south park board to settle the question of jurisdiction over the World's Fair buildings arose yesterday at a conference of Mayor Cermak with Corporation Counsel Sexton and Commissioner of Public Works Sprague.

The two cabinet members pointed out to the mayor that inasmuch as the city furnishes fire protection to Grant park buildings it either should have some control over them or be relieved of responsibility in case of a disastrous fire.

Mrs. William H. Mitchell says:

"This soap holds exclusive rights to all our cleaning, dishwashing, laundering"

Swinging a wicked racket, riding a hunter over the hurdles, entertaining at brilliant dinners, playing with her three beautiful children, Mrs. Mitchell typifies the joy and efficiency of Chicago's young society women. And if you think she isn't concerned about what soap her treasures are laundered in, just ask her.

"Laundering is becoming so complicated—with most of our frocks going washable, and the whole house a riot of color—that I dare not think what a care things would be without this pure, dependable soap," (speaking of American Family Flakes).

"We are so accustomed to plopping frocks and woolens and everything into these gentle suds that even our prized silk comforters* go in, and come out again as bright and soft as new.

"Until you have used American Family Flakes for years as I have, you simply cannot realize what freedom you can have—freedom to indulge your love for dainty, colorful fabrics, and freedom from many household cares.

"For laundresses and maids say they can do better work with less effort, that it saves rubbing, and shows up their work so beautifully—sparkling glassware, linens so snowy and clean-scented, and everything ironed up like new."

Try this laundering magic. You don't have to take it on faith. You have the word of

4 out of 5 Gold Coast Women who have proved it for years and declare it the only soap they would trust with their costly fabrics.

And you can see for yourself how much more soap you get for your money, how easily the dirt slips out in these silky suds, how smoothly things iron.

Use it if for no other reason than that it keeps your hands lovely, and makes wonderful dishwashing suds.

*The secret of washing comforters is to avoid rubbing and to use a soap that rinses out of the cotton perfectly. Soak comforter four or five minutes in rich, lukewarm double-suds. Run it through loose wringer, immerse gently, and repeat several times. Rinse and hang evenly over two lines. American Family Flakes leaves fast colors perfect, and cotton soft as new.

She herself is co-chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. Her home is a great spreading English mansion which she manages with a gifted hand. Loves to hunt and ride—keeps many blooded horses, all hunters, on her farm at Milburn near the exclusive Onwentsia Hunt Club. APPEALS TO U. S. JUDGE AGAINST BAIL FOR FACTOR Crown Lawyer Will Fight Commissioner's Ruling.

Judge Evan A. Evans of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will be asked today for an opinion on United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker's order of yesterday admitting John [Jake the Barber] Factor to bail.

F. R. OVERMYER.

Attorney Franklin R. Overmyer, representing the British crown, which demands Factor's extradition on charges that he swindled British investors out of $7,000,000 in stock deals, served notice on the commissioner and defense attorneys of his intention of taking the matter of bail up with Judge Evans as soon as the order was issued.

Bond Fixed at $50,000.

Bond for the former Halsted street hair cutter was fixed at $50,000, and the commissioner said that it must be in the form of government securities or obligations. The defense offered to put up Liberty bonds, but Factor was not released from the marshal's custody pending the approval of the bond. He probably will go free today, it was said.

Commissioner Walker, in commenting on his action in admitting Factor to bail, pointed out that no such provision is contained in the treaty for extradition between this country and England, but declared that the discretion rested with him under the common jurisprudence of England and the United States. The offense charged, "receiving money knowing the same to have been fraudulently obtained," is bailable in both countries, he said.

Again Tries Motion to Quash.

Defense Attorney David Stansbury was granted leave to file a motion to reconsider a previous motion of the defense to dismiss the complaint and quash the warrant against Factor. The first motion was overruled, and the commissioner said he would not waste much time hearing arguments on the second next Monday afternoon.

Stansbury contends that the offense alleged is not a crime in Illinois, which is necessary for extradition under the treaty.

"The court has seldom, in his years of experience on the bench, had a more difficult problem to decide than has been presented in your case. It has been a burden which he would gladly have been spared, and would have been but for the insistence by both of your attorneys, men of long and active experience at the Illinois bar, who have presented most capably the defense viewpoint and which desire was concurred in by the state's attorney, that he preside at your trial.

"You then by waiving your right to be tried by twelve men, citizens of our county, placed the entire responsibility upon the court. By your failure to take the witness stand and testify in your own behalf so that the court might question you, you added to the already difficult problem and forced the court to make his decision entirely upon the testimony of others.

Other Crimes Are Shown.

"Their testimony showed that you had committed several crimes.

"First, you broke into a schoolhouse where you know you had no right to be.

"Second, while there you stole a revolver which had been used for the purpose of starting various athletic events.

"Third, you purchased bullets and practiced shooting with that revolver and then for about two weeks you carried this loaded weapon concealed on your person.

"Fourth you again forcibly reentered the same school, carrying with you the loaded stolen revolver.

"Fifth, when you were found in the school you were, as you should have been, ordered by an apparently friendly policeman to put on your clothing and leave; brooking no interference with your plans, looking squarely at the officer, fully dressed in his police uniform, you drew from your clothing the loaded revolver and had the nerve to order that policeman to put up his hands; when he failed to obey, you deliberately pulled the trigger and killed him.

"Under those facts the court feels that there can be only one finding, that is, that you are guilty of murder."

Judge Confers with Warden.

Judge Sabath's decision testified to the concern he had experienced over it. Such concern, in fact, that he had made, he revealed, a trip to Joliet prison to confer with Warden Henry C. Hill about the possible incarceration of the boy and what effect it might have on him to be thrown among older, more hardened members of the criminal element.

As a result of that conference, Warden Hill has determined, he said yesterday, that upon the arrival of the boy he will have an interview with him to determine what surroundings and what work shall be assigned to him.

"I cannot say until I see the boy," the warden explained, "just what his duties or his living quarters may be here. I will have to discuss his work and his ideas with him, and after that, we'll see. It is quite definite that I intend to see to it that so young a boy will not be in contact with the older, more dangerous characters here. He probably will be an errand boy."

Eligible to Parole in 10 Years.

Judge Sabath pointed out that under the 18 year sentence Corry will be eligible for parole in ten years and three months if he has a good conduct record, but he urged that if the boy's record in this respect is not good he be compelled to serve the full 18 years.

Mrs. Helen Smith, widow of Policeman Smith, upon whose insistence Varner was tried on a murder instead of a manslaughter charge, declared she was satisfied with the sentence.

BOY SHOT DEAD AS CHUM PLAYS STICKUP MAN

Melvin Hamm, 15 years old, 12631 Maple avenue, Blue Island, was shot and fatally wounded in his home yesterday when Russell Stone, 15 years old, a playmate, pointed a revolver at him in fun. The gun went off, the bullet striking Melvin under the left arm. He died 10 minutes later in St. Francis hospital.

Russell, who lives at 12815 Western avenue, Blue Island, found the gun in a dresser drawer, and walked into the parlor where his brother, Melvin, 10 years old, was seated at the piano with young Hamm.

He ordered the two boys to throw up their hands. When they turned the gun discharged and the Hamm boy fell to the floor.

BUT I've noticed recently that more of my girl friends are smoking CHESTERFIELD, and I asked why.

"One of them said that CHESTERFIELDS really are milder and taste better—that there is nothing strong or sharp or bitter about them.

"Another one spoke up and said that she too liked the taste of CHESTERFIELDS; but that she was especially pleased with the package—so neat and attractive. Chesterfields—she added—are made right—properly filled—and burn evenly; and she thought possibly they were using a better cigarette paper.

"Still another one agreed with all we'd said. She'd been smoking CHESTERFIELDS for a long, long time, and had always liked them; but she also liked the way they were advertised. The advertising seemed to her to be the truth and the whole truth—it wasn't always knocking somebody or something!"

GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK. [Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 28.—[Special.]—It was all very matter of fact, Charles A. Lindberghs' takeoff this afternoon for their 7,000 mile through the air to adventure and orient.

Anne Lindbergh hitched up her dark jodhpurs until her blue socks ed at the ankle; made a face as listering sun shot across the and scrambled up into the scar- and black seaplane, where she down into the rear cockpit until her bare, bobbed head was visible. colonel wiped some of the per- ation from his forehead, swung his legs into the front cockpit, wrig- around a bit as he adjusted a chute to his slim body, and settled in the seat.

Then they turned and smiled back the group of excited folks gathered the concrete beach of the naval port.

"Wave your hand," a picture man ested.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who had put on her white helmet with its pair of goggles, took up her right hand and wriggled it. Her husband, busy with the details of starting, grinned at the group of delighted naval officials.

The navy group was delighted, Commander Warren G. Child was saying, because, for this time at least the colonel has transferred his allegiance to naval aviation, and is traveling in a seaplane."

The motor began to whir; two officers in hip boots waded in to shore; the seaplane swam forward, and somebody thought to pull out his watch and shout, "It's 18 minutes past 1."

For ten minutes or so the machine taxied casually up the river and back, as amateur aviators explained that he was warming up. Then the machine began to rise, to circle the airport, to tip jauntily over to the right, then to the left, in a signal of farewell to the naval officers and attendants, to the diplomats and the government officials who lined the shore. On the last dip down, Col. Lindbergh tossed out a tiny parachute of white which disappeared in the middle of the river.

And in a short time the red and black silhouette was lost in the dazzling sunlight as the ship started out, bound for New York and later for North Haven, Me.

Preferring to rely on labor rather than luck, the Lindberghs have never cluttered up their baggage with four leaf clovers, horseshoes, and the like. But on this trip they will carry a good luck omen, a Japanese fan presented to Mrs. Lindbergh last night by Mme. Nisha, wife of Mamoru Nisha, member of the Japanese parliament, who arrived in Washington in time to meet the flyers.

"It will bring you good luck," Mme. Nisha explained as she presented the fan. "Take it and waft away the fogs you will find over the Pacific."

So the silken fan went down into the cockpit with the concentrated food and the blankets, with the pistols and the fishing tackle, with the collapsible rubber boat and the tent.

Busy on Plane All Morning.

All this morning the flying couple had been busy at the airport. On the way to it they stopped at a hardware store, where Lindbergh went in and bought some rope and pliers. Mrs. Lindbergh remained in the automobile doing some last minute sewing. Then they stopped at the Japanese embassy to get a visa.

At the field she got busy at once with the radio connections and sat in the broiling sun in the cockpit, hatless, for two hours. Lindbergh's primary concern was the adjustment of an anchor light.

At half past twelve Commander Child ask when they wanted lunch.

"Lunch?" Lindbergh repeated the word as if he'd never heard of it and kept on twisting gadgets on the plane.

"We don't want any," said Anne, and her husband nodded.

At 1 o'clock they were persuaded to climb down from the machine and go into the officers' quarters long enough to take a glass of water.

Leave Taking Brief.

Then there was the leave taking with Commander Child, with Assistant Secretary of the Navy [for air] Davis S. Ingalls, who lamented, enviously, that he did not have on his blue shirt for flight, and with Lieut. Carl B. Harper, who has had a big part in the designing of this plane.

Just as the tall, blond man and the short dark girl started for the ship an acquaintance rushed up and said, loud enough for everybody to hear, "Tell me, Mrs. Lindbergh, are you scared?"

She burst out laughing.

And Lindbergh grinned.

Goes to Prison for Term Imposed Two Years Ago

Frank J. Dore, 24 years old, 901 North Harvey street, Oak Park, was sent to the Joliet penitentiary yesterday to serve a one to ten year sentence for operating a confidence game, imposed on him by Judge Otto Kerner, June 27, 1929. Dore, who appealed the case when he was found guilty of the charge, was released in $7,500 bond, and although the supreme court subsequently affirmed the sentence, 14 months ago, he was free until yesterday.

DIES AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Catherine Rockford, 84 years old, 5528 South Elizabeth street, who was injured recently in an automobile accident, died yesterday at her home. Her death, however, was attributed to infirmities of age, and not to the accident.

AMY JOHNSON IN MOSCOW ON FLIGHT TO TOKIO

MOSCOW, July 28.—(AP)—Amy Johnson, noted British aviatrix who is attempting a flight from England to Tokio with Flying Instructor J. Humphreys, brought her plane down here tonight in darkness after a flight of more than 12 hours from Berlin.

The Berlin-Moscow flight was broken by two stops for fuel, one at Koenigsberg, Germany, and the other at Velikie Luki, Russia. The flyers were very tired. They had only one hour's sleep since they left Hendon, England, yesterday.

They encountered heavy rains and thick fog between Berlin and Koenigsberg which forced them back to the coast line, but the remainder of the trip, they said, was made under favorable conditions. They plan to take off again at 6 a. m.

Third Flight of Airplane He Built Causes His Death

Mitchell, S. D., July 28.—(AP)—The third flight of an airplane he built caused the death today of C. A. Brown, 30. The craft, which witnesses said had difficulty gaining altitude, fell 400 feet.

ZEPPELIN MEETS ICE BREAKER IN ARCTIC; SOARS ON

Exchange 12,000 Letters at Polar Rendezvous.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 28.—The Graf Zeppelin, huge German dirigible carrying scientists on a trip to the arctic, kept its rendezvous with the Russian icebreaker Maligin last night and today was again speeding north over icebergs. The airship and the icebreaker met near the Franz Josef archipelago.

According to dispatches received here, the Zeppelin, with Commander Hugo Eckener at the controls, alighted on the open sea just a few yards from the anchored icebreaker.

Zep Rides Waves Easily.

The airship, equipped with pontoons, rode the waves easily as the two "ships" exchanged mail. Soon thereafter the Graf rose in a perfect takeoff to resume its voyage north.

As the dirigible approached the Maligin all aboard hustled to get the mail together. Upon sighting the Maligin, Commander Eckener notified the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen by radio that he was preparing to land in the bay off Hooker Island, Franz Josef Land.

Officials at Friedrichshafen announced that the dirigible had remained alongside the icebreaker for thirteen minutes and that Commander Eckener decided to cut his redezvous short because of floating ice.

The weather at the time of the landing was reported by Commander Eckener as "quite fair."

Exchange 12,000 Letters.

It is estimated that about 12,000 letters were exchanged between the two ships. The Zeppelin's next contact with civilization may be with a Russian scientist, who has been in the Arctic for more than a year. The Graf is carrying a parcel, containing apples, strawberries and other delicacies for the scientist, named Prof. Urvantzev.

The address on the parcel reads "Northern land, 73 degrees 29 minutes 59 seconds north latitude, 91 degrees 7 minutes 56 seconds longitude east."

SENOR SOPO DANCES WELL ENOUGH ALONE; COURT FREES HIM

Arraigned on a charge of robbery, he snapped his fingers at the judge, danced around a bit, and walked out of court a free man—which breaks some sort of record.

Lupe Sopo, 24 years old, 840 Forquer street, a handsome Mexican youth, did just that. He would have done more, but Judge Matthew D. Hartigan refused him permission.

Sopo was arrested Sunday night on complaint of George Vriza, 508 South Halsted street, who said that the youth was one of three men who held him up and robbed him of $1.

"What have you to say for yourself?" Judge Hartigan asked him.

"I was just coming from a dance," Sopo replied. "I was standing in a crowd wondering what that man was hollering about when I was arrested."

"Can you dance?" queried the court. Lupe nodded. "Then prove it," the judge said. A space was cleared in front of the bench and Sopo set to work.

"I could do better if I had a partner," Sopo said to the judge, glancing around the court.

"Case dismissed," Judge Hartigan declared.

CHILDBIRTH DRUG DENIED APPROVAL BY MEDICAL BODY

Pernocton, the German drug described in a dispatch yesterday as in regular use in a New York hospital by obstetricians who had found it a boon in alleviating the pains of childbirth, has been denied the approval of the American Medical association.

Prof. W. A. Puckner, director of the pharmacy and chemistry council of the association, commenting on the claims of the New York physicians, said it was the council's opinion that ether remains the best anaesthetic in cases of childbirth. Ether, the professor pointed out, is always susceptible to control by the anaesthetician, whereas pernocton is not.

The German drug has been on the market since 1929, according to Prof. Puckner, and was subjected to many experiments before the council voted against its inclusion in the association's publication entitled "New and Unofficial Remedies." The drug, a derivative of barbital, is administered intravenously and thus comes within the classification of the drugs used in "twilight sleep," an obstetrical anaesthetic whose use was once widely publicised but now has been generally discarded as too dangerous.

ZAMORA CABINET BEGS TO STAY IN POWER IN SPAIN

President Defends Rule; Near Riot Follows.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, July 28.—Before Spain's national assembly was at last set for action after two weeks of scrutiny of credentials, the provisional government of the infant republic resigned its powers tonight. In resigning it spoke in defense of its care of the republic during the first three months of its existence, and then it turned the deputies of the nation loose in a blistering debate as to whether it is to be returned to power.

This debate began luridly tonight. To the initiates the proceedings down on the floor of the ornate congress hall, inherited from the monarchy, could only seem to be a prelude to a mass of crime.

Call Ministers "Assassins."

Twice tonight because of the shootings at Seville, where communists, revolutionists and the syndicalists got the worst of a ruction with the troops, the ministers of the provisional government were called assassins and once Miguel Maura, the stalwart minister of the interior, wanted to leap a mahogany bench and get his man. Ugly Spanish words crackled like static.

This sort of thing is expected to continue until Thursday night when, barring an upset and severe casualties in the ranks of the coalition backing him, Provisional President Alcala Zamora and his men will be voted back into power until the constitution is accepted and the republic is definitely consolidated.

Agrarian reforms and an investigation of the alleged scullduggery of past dictatorships will be effected concurrently.

Assembly Cheers Zamora.

"In the last three weeks we have done the work of a century and aroused Spain from its ancient turpitude," he said and was cheered.

He then confounded the prophets, who saw disaster ahead, by declaring that if he was returned to power the ministerial lineup would remain unchanged.

Count Romanones limped into the parliamentary session for the first time. After 42 years of parliamentary struggle under the crown he said it would be curious to see what a republican assembly was like. He is the only monarchist deputy and he will be the one to read Alfonso's formal abdication in favor of his third son, Prince Juan, when the moment comes.

Yangtze River Overflows; Threatens City of 800,000

HANKOW, China, July 28.—(AP)—The Yangtze river overflowed today, threatening to flood this city of 800,000 population. Part of the Chinese quarters and the old British, Russian, French and German concession districts were submerged. Hankow's foreign population numbers about 460 British, 50 Germans, 100 Americans and 80 French.

Bill Makes It a Crime to Plant Too Much Cotton

Austin, Tex., July 28.—(AP)—A bill to make the successive planting of acreage to cotton a misdemeanor, was reported favorably today out of committee in the Texas state senate. It will be taken up later for passage or rejection.

CHICAGO, WORLD PORT, WELCOMES EUROPEAN SHIP

The Anna Brings First Merchandise Cargo.

Bringing the first cargo of general merchandise to be transported direct from Europe to Chicago, the Anna, a 2,500 ton Swedish freighter, moored at the Montgomery Ward & Co.'s dock in the north branch of the river at Chicago avenue yesterday.

Since June 25, when it cleared from Antwerp, the steamer has crossed the Atlantic, traversed the St. Lawrence waterway and the Welland canal, and sailed through the great lakes to Chicago. Its arrival was hailed by Association of Commerce officials as a genuine indication of Chicago's potentialities as a seaport.

Takes On Cargo for Europe.

The Anna brought barbed wire, hardware, sardines and printed matter to Montgomery Ward & Co. It began loading manufactured goods, copper and tallow at the North Pier terminal last night to sail for home by the end of the week with a Chicago cargo for European ports. It may load additional goods in Toronto but the bulk of the freight will be of local manufacture.

Vessels from foreign ports have frequently brought unit cargoes, such as China clay, block tin and other products to Chicago, but the Anna is the first to carry general merchandise.

The Anna is 257 feet long and has a 37 foot beam. Grey and a little rusty from its ocean crossing, it was towed through the Michigan avenue bridge about 10:30 a. m., flags flying from the masthead and a band playing on deck.

Young Captain Greeted.

At the Ward company dock, George B. Everitt, president of the company; Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce; Collector of Customs Czarnecki, and others went aboard to meet the young master, Capt. Alf Jonasson, 29 years old, and his officers.

As tugs drew the ship to the wharf, rolls of paper streamers whirled down from the windows of the Ward building and festooned the vessel's upper works, the funnel and the bridge. Mr. Everitt presented Capt. Jonasson with an inscribed gold watch commemorating the voyage and after an inspection of the ship, the party lunched in the mail order plant's dining room.

GREETER'S CAR ARRIVES; PUBLIC IS DENIED VIEW

The white seven-passenger sedan which City Greeter Gaw will use to transport distinguished guests about Chicago arrived at the Nash Motor company plant yesterday—after Mr. Gaw left on his vacation. When he returns and puts it to use Mr. Gaw will have flank escorts of policemen on white motorcycles to accompany The milk-colored equipage, but for the present sight of it will be denied to the citizens.

ALL EXPENSES
PERSONALLY ESCORTED

Sailings June to September

CRUISE to the heart of Old French-Canada. We take you by rail to Toronto, Queen City of Canada, where your foreign adventure begins. You set sail on a luxurious steamer, one of the world's largest fresh water fleet. You will visit, en route, Montreal—the metropolis, and the fortress city of Quebec, Gibraltar of North America.

You will cruise among the Thousand Islands—set like a thousand jewels in azure blue waters, experience the thrills of shooting the great St. Lawrence Rapids. Near Quebec you will pay your respects at the miracle shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré and hear the thunder of Montmorency Falls, higher than Niagara.

Beyond Quebec the high Laurentians follow the St. Lawrence and you cruise in the shadow of these ancient mountains. The steamer puts in at fashionable Murray Bay, and quaint and lovely Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The glory of the Saguenay River, seen at sunset and again at dawn, is a spectacle to impress the most widely travelled. The wild grandeur of Trinity Bay, guarded by the tremendous capes, Trinity and Eternity—the ship's siren reverberating like giant laughter among the eternal hills—gives you a touch of the loneliness, austerity and beauty of the silent places.

A spirit of gaiety prevails for the entire journey, and there is not a dull moment on ship or shore. You dance every evening to the music of a lively orchestra. Delicious meals satisfy ravenous appetites. You will vote this the best vacation ever.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

GERMAN LEADERS GATHER TODAY TO SOLVE OWN CRISIS

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 28.—Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany and Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Henderson of Great Britain cruised all this afternoon on the lakes near Berlin far away from the bustling city. They discussed disarmament and how it might be brought about, as well as general trade and how it could be improved.

But the main topic of their conversation, it is learned from a reliable source, was how a closer rapprochement of France and Germany could be brought about without Germany being compelled to accept the political conditions set by the French as the price for their closer cooperation.

Germans Seek to Help Selves.

The difficulty for all concerned is that Premier Laval has told Chancellor Bruening that even if the French government loaned money to Germany it would not get the Frenchmen to buy the loan unless it was solidly backed by England and America. Bruening is now urging his country to make an energetic attempt to organize and help itself, without relying on foreign help.

The leading German industrialists have called an extraordinary meeting in Berlin tomorrow to devise a complete "self help" program.

Agriculturists also have called a meeting to agitate for higher customs duties to reduce purchases abroad. A certain amount of such purchases are necessary, however, since German agriculture is able to feed only 50 million of the 63 million inhabitants of this densely populated and industrialized country.

Bank Restrictions Eased.

An emergency decree issued tonight loosens the strings on banking institutions slightly, and officials are hopeful that it will be possible to abandon the restrictions entirely next Monday. Tonight's decree permits maximum withdrawals from checking accounts of $75 instead of $50 as heretofore. No change was made with regard to savings accounts. The maximum which may be withdrawn from these remains at $7.50.

The Allgemeine Duetsche Credit Anstalt, an important Dresden bank, which is in slight difficulties, tonight was merged with the Saxon State bank. Since the Saxon constitution provides that the state bank is backed by all the resources of the state, it is felt that this new concern will be able to consolidate the financial situation in Saxony.

MacDonald Is Optimistic.

Mr. MacDonald, following the long conference on the lakes, said his visit here had confirmed his belief that "the quality of the German people and their industrious qualities will help them back to normal, despite the fact that the crisis is very complicated."

Applause and cheers continued to follow Mr. MacDonald wherever he went today. This morning when the British officials called on President von Hindenburg, cheering throngs lined the streets. Crowds again cheered the Britishers when they went to call on the premier of Prussia, who, as one of the outstanding Socialist officials of Germany, gave a luncheon for the British laborites.

This afternoon Bruening and Curtius and their guests slipped off unnoticed to a trim sloop, the Mark, which was awaiting them hidden under a bridge. When they returned from the excursion a communique was issued telling of the cordiality of the conversations and expressing hope that the "personal contacts established would be maintained and developed."

Tonight three British military airplanes are roosting at Tempelhof airdrome with German flyers gaping at them, since Germany is not allowed to own military planes. The Britishers are here awaiting Mr. McDonald, who, weather permitting, will fly back to London tomorrow morning. Mr. Henderson left tonight.

New Bank Incorporated.

(Copyright; 1931: By the New York Times.)

BERLIN, July 28.—The $48,000,000 acceptance and Guaranty bank, which is to guarantee bank acceptances, thereby making them discountable by the Reichsbank in order to provide banks with cash and credits to meet all demands that may arise when the banks are fully reopened, was incorporated today at the Reichsbank. Bernhard Dernenberg, former minister of finance, was appointed its head.

The bank will start activities the latter part of this week, but its facilities will only be at the disposal of the big banks that organized it and a few others, among them the Danat bank, which closed recently. The smaller private banks and especially the provincial banks will, therefore, be forced to form an organization of their own in order to safeguard themselves against runs.

Bruening May Visit Mussolini.

BERLIN, July 28.—(AP)—Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius were making plans to leave for Rome next week to visit Premier Mussolini, it was learned on good authority tonight.

Virginia Dawes, 17 year old daughter of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes will face Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter of Evanston today on a charge of speeding. Policeman Hubert Keiah and Fred Wynn arrested her yesterday afternoon on Sheridan road near the campus of Northwestern university, where she is a student, charging that she was driving 45 miles an hour.

She was released there on her own recognizance.

STIMSON TELLS GERMANY TO QUIT BEWAILING FATE

Warns Nation She Must Save Herself.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 28.—Secretary of State Stimson returned to London today from his visit to Berlin. He flew from Berlin to Amsterdam yesterday and took the boat from the Hook of Holland to England this morning.

Mr. Stimson said he had had an interesting visit to Berlin and that he was much impressed by the stability and order of the German people.

Having accomplished a quantity of diplomatic work during the last two weeks, Mr. Stimson is now going on a real vacation. He will leave London Friday night for north Scotland, where he will spend a month shooting and fishing. He proposes to cut himself off from the world and enjoy life. Before he goes he has one more dinner engagement at the house of commons with Foreign Secretary Henderson and Prime Minister MacDonald on Thursday night.

Talks Turkey to Germans.

During his visit to Berlin Mr. Stimson talked plainly and in a most friendly fashion to the Germans. He told them that it was up to them to save themselves, and that no good could be attained by making constant complaints against their fate.

On one occasion Secretary Stimson and Chancellor Bruening discovered that they had been fighting against each other at Bourjon Wood. Col. Stimson was serving with an American unit attached to the British army and Chancellor Bruening was commanding a German machine gun squad.

There were long talks on disarmament, during which, it is reported, Mr. Stimson told the Germans that America had gone as far as possible and that it would not make any difference to Europe if the whole of the American fleet was sunk and its army disbanded. There would still be unsettled questions in Europe which must be discussed and ironed out between the interested nations themselves before the big disarmament conference at Geneva next February.

Tells France Same Thing.

This also was what he said to the French when he talked with them, and it may be taken as America's settled policy toward European disarmament.

He also stressed that the growing rapprochement of French and German politicians was most important in the cause of world peace and restoration of prosperity.

Ambassador Dawes also arrived in London today from his vacation in America, which was cut short by order of President Hoover. He had lunch with Mr. Stimson at the American embassy.

Ambassador Dawes refused to discuss political questions, but on the business outlook in America he said there were many indications in the United States of a change in attitude from mass pessimism to optimism, which always presages better business conditions. In many parts of the country, he said, there was an increasing demand for electric power, the decreasing demand for which was one of the first signs of the depression. He also said that the last quarter's reports on American business and manufacturing corporations were better.

Three Gunmen Ransack Downtown Coffee Shop

Three gunmen yesterday forced fifteen customers and six employés into the kitchen of the Zonenblick Coffee shop, 318 West Van Buren street, and while one stood guard the other two searched the place for money. Mr. Zonenblick told the Central police that the men had obtained $1,181.

BRITISH BANKERS' PLAN FOR FRENCH HELP HITS SNAG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 28.—A hitch in the efforts of the Bank of England to secure support from the Bank of France was reported in London tonight. It is understood that a rift has separated British financial and governmental views, particularly regarding the reported $100,000,000 credit which was to be extended to the Bank of England to relieve the pressure brought on by the huge withdrawals of gold by French bankers.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, was said to be set against such a plan on the grounds that credits are unnecessary. Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, differed with him.

The Daily Herald, official organ of the Labor party, flatly denies that the Bank of France is arranging to extend a $100,000,000 credit to the Bank of England. "There is no truth whatever in this tale, the evident purpose of which is to shake British credit in Europe," the Herald says. "No assistance has been asked for by the Bank of England, none is required and none is desired."

MUSSOLINI 48 TODAY; STARTS EVENT WITH SWIM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 28.—Premier Benito Mussolini tomorrow attains his 48th birthday. He was born July 29, 1883, in Dovia, a commune of Predappio in the province of Forli (Romagna), on the Adriatic side of Italy.

Il duce, in accordance with his annual custom, will celebrate the event. Piloting his high powered automobile, and accompanied by his wife, he left Rome yesterday for Riccione, near Rimini, to spend his birthday with their two sons, Bruno and Vittorio, and his nephew, Vito Mussolini, son of Arnaldo Mussolini.

Premier Mussolini started his birthday holiday with a long swim. He swam about two miles in the Adriatic, dodging about among all sorts of punts and small boats belonging to the seashore crowds. Later he visited the seaside colony of children, maintained by the Fascists, and romping with the boys and girls. He will spend tomorrow resting at Riccione and will return to Rome at the end of the week.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

A JUDICIAL REBUKE OF ENTRAPMENT.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago has reversed a federal District court jury verdict by which five Indianapolis policemen were convicted of conspiracy to protect a speakeasy. The appeal court, Judges Evans, Sparks and Alschuler, found the conviction "a shock to the court's sense of justice." The policemen had been entrapped by prohibition agents.

A great deal of the Volstead mentality and morality was revealed in the case. The prohibition agents opened a place of business for the sale of liquor and put a colored man with a police record in charge of it. It was stocked and the policemen were treated to drinks. They then were asked to protect the place and consented, whereupon they were arrested, indicted, tried and convicted. By such procedure the government agents did not detect a crime. They procured one. They disclosed the willingness of the police to connive at violation of the prohibition law but in doing so they had to become lawless themselves. The first crime was one simulated by the government and the trapped men became parties to it after it had been contrived by the agents. The prohibition morality tempted men to evil in order that it might punish them when they yielded.

The appeal judges said there was a vast difference between using decoys to detect the commission of a crime and committing the crime to lure men into it. The difference is apparent in law, in morality, in common usage and opinion, and in the tenets of religion. It is repugnant to justice, to the religious code, and to common decency, but Volstead has a peculiar effect upon its advocates, devotees and agents. The court noted in its opinion that this case was not an unusual one but of "ever increasing frequency."

The zealot mind is always a dark one and usually with sadistic propensities. It is nearly always angry and seldom equable. It sees things out of proportion and is vengeful. First it justifies and then enjoys unusual punishments. It finds gratification, a sensual thrill, in imposing a savage penalty upon obstinacy, contumacy or nonconformity. The violation of a law of zealotry gives the zealot a sense of personal outrage which will drive him to an extremity to have a suitable and satisfactory revenge. This accounts for the various phenomena of prohibition, the excessive and cruel punishment of wretches, the indifference to the killing of innocent people, and the justification of methods of enforcement abhorrent to law, justice and common feeling.

The courts have not invariably put a cool and dispassionate check upon the processes which have sprung out of the fierce monomania of the Volstead addicts. In this case before the Court of Appeals in Chicago it has been done in a reasoned and timely opinion which will have its effect upon the official agents of the law, themselves probably not mentally disordered but nevertheless perfectly willing to take advantage of opportunities blessed by bigotry but with consequences scandalous to law.

A SHAVIAN INDORSEMENT.

Bernard Shaw's genial indorsement of the soviet régime in Russia will not be taken very seriously outside of that country. It classifies perhaps with the post-prandial compliments with which we are familiar. But in this case it has a special irony. The bolshevik rule which pleases Mr. Shaw so much has suppressed all public discussion and as far as possible all private utterance that in any degree criticizes the philosophy of sovietism, its doctrines and essential policies. But Mr. Shaw has spent a long lifetime attacking capitalism and has indulged an unrestrained loquacity which would have cost him exile or death under the rule he now crowns with the laurels of his approval. There is no country in the world G. B. S. would find more intolerable than soviet Russia if he had to remain there, for it would promptly deprive him of the greatest joy of the Shavian existence, the free enjoyment of the gift of gab.

Socialists, who are in the main uncommonly strict in their logic and doctrinal distinctions, will not precisely welcome the great Bernard's indorsement of the present régime, for while Shaw has been telling them in Russia that he is a Marxist and therefore a forerunner of the bolshevik revolution, he has failed to remind the Russians that the bolshevik revolution turned its back on Marx and has ignored and still ignores a good part of his doctrine. Marx, if a nonbeliever understands his philosophy, believed in a process of economic and social evolution as essential to the preparation of society for a successful operation of the socialist order and he would have had no faith in an experiment which repudiated this evolutionary process and substituted a régime of ruthless force and iron oppression for the preparation he considered essential to the establishment of an efficient socialist state. Consistent Marxians, socialists in the western sense, have been fed to the bolshevik machine guns in large numbers, as the great G. B. S. would have been if he had lived in Russia since the bolshevik tyranny was established, unless of course Shaw had decided to suppress his urge to self-expression—and that would have been as fatal to him as a midnight visit from the Gaypayo.

FRANCE IN THE CONFERENCE.

An English economist on the air interpreting the London conference for American listeners touched the favorite point of internationalists, that the people of the United States must see how tightly they are involved in world affairs and how susceptible they are to consequences if things go wrong. Therefore they must join up and keep things from going wrong.

The iron man of that conference was France. The French statesmen maintained that France had just self-interests which were to be considered by it above the interests of other nations. France sits in the middle of the complications, financial, social, political and military, which are supposed to have unescapable consequences for the United States. It apparently feared none of them. Its confidence apparently was justified. The conference could not scare the Frenchmen into a surrender of what they held as essential to their own well being. Evidently they trusted to their own ability to survive if the situation developed misfortunes or disasters for other nations. They were called selfish, but the other powers could not prove to them that they were wrong. Their own house was in order. Their national interests were safeguarded and with diplomats threatening a break down in European and world structure they were serene.

The lessons of the situation appear to be confused. The moral which the promoters endeavor to convey to the United States is confuted by the outstanding phenomenon of the conference. Obviously France did precisely the thing which cannot be done.

AMERICA IN JAIL.

The latest Wickersham commission report presents a picture of our prison system which will give little satisfaction to Americans. It would give even less if it reminded them that a large proportion of its victims are in for offenses against a law which something like half if not more of the people of the United States consider a tyrannical imposition, inconsistent with the principles of American free society and violative of their fundamental rights. In fact some of the conditions, justly complained of are caused or at least seriously aggravated by the imprisonment of this class of offenders, for which our jails and penitentiaries were not planned or prepared.

Perhaps this consideration will broaden and emphasize the demand for reform. Certainly if the tendency to invent new crimes and misdemeanors is to continue, the American people will not only have to build more jails but greatly improve them and their administration, since a considerable part of our people will be in them.

THE CONVENTIONS FOR CHICAGO.

Atlantic City, we learn from a recent news report, is putting forth its claims to consideration as the place of meeting for the next national party conventions. The claims are strong enough to obtain a respectful hearing. Atlantic City has plenty of good hotels and is situated on the sea, where sea breezes and bathing are to be had. But that about finishes the list. Chicago matches the best that can be said for Atlantic City and then has only begun to talk.

Chicago is amply supplied with first rate hotels and is situated on a great and beautiful body of water, whose breezes are famous and whose bathing facilities are all that could be wished. The summer climate of Chicago, and we can make the assertion now with the winds from the superheated plains trying to push the mercury to the top of the bulb, is unsurpassed in the temperate zone. Chicago is moving steadily to the first place as a great summer resort, since its climate and facilities for entertainment of all kinds are unrivaled. Bathing, trips on the lake, golf, tennis, baseball, theaters, the incomparable Ravinia opera, alone worth a visit to Chicago; hotels fronting the water, great parks and boulevards, the Art Institute, Field Museum, Planetarium, Aquarium, all are at the disposal of visitors of all tastes and interests. Chicago also possesses a modern hall easily accessible and perfectly adapted to convention requirements.

Finally this unequaled great resort is in the center of the country, equalizing the travel of the delegates, the fairest selection from the standpoint of the common convenience and expense.

There is no city in the United States that offers so many advantages, and it will be chosen by both parties if fair consideration is given them. Delegates will naturally regard their political task as of first importance, and there is no place where it can be more conveniently and comfortably performed. But if Chicago is chosen the trip can include experiences well worth having. It can be made a vacation as well as a task.

We have a committee to present the advantages of Chicago to the party managements. They have the strongest possible case and they will be successful if the interests of the delegates control the decision.

Editorial of the Day

LEGISLATORS TO THE REAR.

[New York Times.]

How has it come about that, especially in critical times, we breathe easier if congress is not in session? The feeling is undoubted, whether justified or not. Indignant senators assert that it is not justified. Senator Borah, who as chairman of the foreign relations committee in the senate might be supposed to have a specially keen interest in what has been going on since he went away to Idaho, has resented the intimation that the administration would be hampered if congress were in session. To his mind this is a flat renunciation of the fundamental principles of representative government. Who better can express the popular will than the men who have been elected for the very purpose of expressing it? With eloquent appeals to the constitution, Mr. Borah has insisted that congress in session means wisdom on tap and help available for every honest governmental plan.

On paper and in theory this is correct. It is what ought to be. But everybody knows that it is not the fact. And if it is asked who are responsible for the lessened respect in which legislators are held, the answer is not far to seek. They themselves have cheapened their own position and their own function. If there is to be a recovery of the old esteem for congress it must come primarily from congressmen more worthy of esteem in ability and conduct. For them there is a solemn lesson in the sense of satisfaction and of greater safety which the leading nations are now experiencing as they see great affairs handled without the intervention of the lawmakers.

TO PREVENT ATHLETE'S FOOT.

DR. ROBERT T. LEGGE makes some practical suggestions for the prevention of human infection with molds and fungi.

Ringworm of the Feet.

To sterilize shoes: 1 per cent thymol dissolved in gasoline or alcohol. This is poured into the shoe. It must reach all parts of the toe region especially. The excess is drained out and the shoes are set in the sun to dry.

Socks: Nothing but cotton should be worn. Soiled socks should be sterilized by hot water. If all parts of the socks are heated to a temperature in excess of 170 degrees Fahrenheit the fungus is killed. This is not much below boiling. Laundries cannot boil woolen socks because they shrink. Therefore none but cotton socks should be worn.

Skin: Among the remedies to be painted on the infected skin, Dr. Legge reports favorably on 1 to 2 per cent thymol in gasoline or alcohol. Crystol he has also found excellent. Also iodine in glycerine and salicylic, benzoic, and sulphuric acids.

Fungi and molds grow on and in the cells of the skin and nails, and in such structures are exceedingly tenacious of life. In this they differ from bacteria. Therefore, in using a ringworm remedy, it is necessary to frequently repeat the killing process.

Floors: For use in wiping up floors Dr. Legge recommends that bichloride of mercury be added to the floor mopping compounds ordinarily used.

All bath suits should be of cotton. They should be sterilized by boiling. Temperatures of less than 170 are ineffective. All bathers should be required to wear slippers when not in the water. Every pool should be placarded with this legend: "Never place the bare feet upon the floors or shower baths in public places."

Fingernail Infections.

Fruit pickers and persons who squeeze oranges for the juice are prone to develop infections around the finger nails. The infected areas suppurate and the nails may come off. This is known among fruit pickers as fruit poisoning. It is caused by a mold or yeast found in the peelings or rinds of fruits. A reasonable degree of care will prevent this form of infection. When no precautions are taken about one-third of the pickers and handlers acquire paronychia, or infection of the nails.

RAW MILK.

E. B. writes:

1. Is there any truth in the claim that free use of milk will tend to harden the arteries by reason of the high lime content?

2. I was never able to digest raw milk, but happily discovered some six months ago that I do so with evaporated milk and now make one meal a day from three-fourths of a can accompanied by bread and butter, and either salad or vegetable. My age is 76.

3. Would the juices of one-half of a lemon serve as a substitute for 15 drops of hydrochloric acid, taken to correct hypochlorhydria? A physician stated that it would, but I doubt it.

REPLY.

1. I don't think so. The amount of lime absorbed is regulated by something other than supply.

2. Milk is very well buffered by alkali. It is too much so for some people. It is possible to overcome this by scouring the milk, or by adding some acid to it. Among acids used for this purpose are: Orange juice, lemon juice, cider, vinegar, citric and lactic acid.

3. If you need hydrochloric acid you should use it. Lemon juice does not supply it.

SALT DOES NO HARM.

Miss J. R. writes: Does or does not salt harm the teeth and gums when used as a substitute for tooth paste?

REPLY.

LIFE INTEREST IN ESTATE.

Chicago, July 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A party has a life interest in real estate. 2. The will reads that upon his death the property is to be divided equally "among my children or their heirs." One of the children dies prior to the party with life interest. 3. Are the heirs of the dead child liable for the funeral expenses or can the expenses be deducted from their share upon settlement of the estate?

R. W. L.

1. We assume that you mean the will creating the life estate.

2. It seems probable that the wording is such as to give vested interests to "my children," so that upon their death their shares under the will would be an asset of their estates and could be subjected to the payment of funeral expenses.

3. Primarily they would be payable out of the estate.

BRIDGE TENDING.

Chicago, July 14. — [Friend of the People.]—Is the application list opened for bridgetenders, and what is the age limit? Are there any rules to study before one makes an application, and is it an essential that one have a physical examination before applying for position?

W. J. Z.

At this writing no examination is scheduled for the position of bridgetender, but we have placed the name of the writer on our mailing list for notification of the next one called.

Applicants must be more than 21 years of age. Examinations cover operation of bridges, marine signals, etc. It is not necessary to be examined by your family doctor.

SELLING REAL ESTATE.

Chicago, July 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is it possible for a man to sell property, jointly owned with his wife, unknown to her? 2. Can he, within the law, compel her to sell against her wishes? 3. When the property is sold on monthly payments, is it possible for a man to sell all or part of equity still left on property without his wife's signature, if previously owned by both?

F. D.

1. It would be theoretically possible for him to sell his interest.

2. No, except by partition proceedings.

3. It is not clear whether you are asking as to the vender or purchaser. In general, any party can sell anything that he owns if he can find a purchaser but undivided interests in real estate are less salable than the full fee title.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

AN OBSCURE CLERK living in a modest one room apartment in New York has gone into bankruptcy, as he owes forty-four million dollars and all he possesses to pay it with is one hundred bucks. Which shows that America is indeed a land of opportunity. Think of it: a poor boy with only a hundred smackers owing forty-four million dollars. Where else on the face of the globe is such a thing possible? It gives us fresh courage; what others have done we can do. We hope by stern economy, by diligence, sobriety, and perseverance to do as well as that poor young man in New York has done, and we look forward with hope and ambition shining in our honest face to the day when we, too, can owe forty-four million dollars with only a hundred dollars to pay it with.

Now for a radio loud speaker on top of the shaft, a rock garden at the base on one side, a hot dog stand on another, and two gas stations on the other two sides. Then the thing will be complete, and we wonder how many times Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry will turn over in his grave.

SONGS FOR LYNN.

The breakwater was new
But the lake was the same,
And the moon. . . .
And your studio room,
And the red leather chair
And the cherished caressment
Of your smile. . . .

But in the melancholy garden
Of my fancies,
Where sorrowfully I've walked of late,
You found for me
Bright new, flame-like flowers of courage,
And a sun-lit path
To a new gate!

And out of the sixteen when asked why they were going to Canada sixteen said: "So I can get a drink of real likker and not be treated as though I had murdered my wife's aunt." It seems like a perfectly good reason. It must be, as the English would say—perfectly jolly; oh, quite; to toss down a finger or two of genuine likker and not be treated as though we had murdered our wife's aunt. We, too, shall go to that dear Canada.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 29, 1915.

CHICAGO.—The coroner's jury at 1:20 o'clock this morning found six men responsible for the Eastland disaster. The charges include manslaughter and "such other offenses as the facts may warrant." The six men held are Robert Reid, United States steamboat inspector, with headquarters at St. Joseph, Mich., whose connection with the inspection was exposed by THE TRIBUNE; C. C. Eckliff, United States inspector of steamboat boilers, with headquarters at St. Joseph; William H. Hull, vice president and general manager of the St. Joseph-Chicago Transportation company, owner of the Eastland; W. K. Greenebaum, general manager of the Indiana Transportation company, which chartered the boat; Harry Pedersen, captain of the Eastland, and Joseph M. Erickson, chief engineer of the Eastland and son-in-law of Inspector Reid, as discovered by THE TRIBUNE. The jury recommended the six men be held for both Cook county and United States grand juries and recommended that any others contributing to the disaster be prosecuted. The jury, so far as its jurisdiction in fixing the blame was concerned, included the owners of the ship, the charterers, the operators, and federal inspectors who certified to the seaworthiness of the ship. Included in the verdict was a smashing indictment of lax government inspection, which misled at least 2,500 innocent pleasure seekers to intrust their lives to the charnel ship.

CHICAGO. — Five hundred and twenty-two persons still were missing last night from those who embarked on the annual Western Electric company excursion aboard the ill-fated Eastland. The actual number of bodies pinned below the overturned boat will not be known for at least two weeks. The work of righting the capsized boat has been in progress since yesterday but it will take at least two weeks to complete the task. Meanwhile the figures show the number of known dead to be 831; identified bodies, 828; unidentified, 3, and missing, 522, a total of 1,353.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—As the result of the conference held in New York between President Shaffer and Secretary Williams of the Amalgamated association and J. Pierpont Morgan, C. M. Schwab and E. H. Gary, a call has been issued for a meeting of the general executive committee of the association here. The strike leaders take this as direct evidence that the conditions are favorable for settlement of the strike within a week.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Thomas F. Schley, captain of the regular army and son of Rear Admiral Schley, passed through Salt Lake City and declared that sensational evidence would be introduced to clear his father of the charges that have led to the official inquiry. Among other things, Capt. Schley told of a letter from Rear Admiral Sampson which directed Rear Admiral Schley to remain off Cienfuegos. This letter, the captain said, had been suppressed.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 29, 1881.

WASHINGTON. — The President continues to improve steadily. He has passed another favorable day. About 5 p. m. there was a slight rise in the pulse and in the temperature, caused by a stoppage of the drainage tubes. When the tubes were cleared the flow resumed and the fever subsided. It had passed away a little after 7 o'clock. From that time the President has rested quietly, and the favorable symptoms of the day have returned.

WASHINGTON.—Each day brings forth fresh particulars tending to prove Guiteau one of the meanest ruffians of this or any other country. His wife procured a divorce from him in the fall of 1873, and the base ruffian was one of the witnesses against himself, and induced the woman with whom he was guilty to take the stand also to testify that the charges of infidelity against him were true.

RICHMOND, Va.—The home and birthplace of President Madison at Montpelier, Va., was sold at public auction to James L. Carrington, of the Exchange hotel, Richmond, Va., the price paid being $20,000.

ALL ABOUT BARRY.

Waukon, Ia., July 9.—I got all het up about MacCartie's sublime ignorance of American history, and I was writing a wordy answer when I noticed the rubric in this department requiring writers to confine themselves to a few hundred words. Checking up, I find I owe MacCartie a debt of gratitude, for my own ignorance of Barry's work was dense, although I formerly occupied a college chair in history.

Will some one help me out? The title, "Commodore," was not born officially until 1863. Was Barry's justification for this title nonofficial out of the fact that, as captain, he had charge of several vessels?

Highlights in Barry's life I find as follows:

1. Command of Lexington Dec. 7, 1775. First commission issued by the continental congress.

2. Capture of the Edward April 7, 1776; first war vessel captured by a commissioned continental navy officer.

3. Command of the Effingham, October, 1776, to May, 1778.

4. During blockade fought as a soldier at Trenton and Princetown.

5. His command of the Raleigh, 1778.

6. His tussle with the British vessels Experiment and Unicorn.

7. His work with the privateer Delaware, 1779, and capture of the sloop-of-war Harlem.

8. His capture commanding the Alliance of the brigs Mars and Minerva, 1781.

9. His severe wound in action May 28, 1781, with the Atalanta and Trepassey, who struck colors.

10. 1782, his cruise netting war prizes to the amount of $2,919,900, a tidy sum in those days.

11. His embarrassment to the British frigate Sybille, March 10, 1783.

12. His commission signed by Washington, Feb. 22, 1797, and predating his title of ranking officer—captain in the American navy to June 4, 1794. He was registered No. 1, thus officially denominated to his primacy in the infant American navy.

The status that worried MacCartie in Washington was a result of $50,000 appropriation by congress in 1906. Fairmount park, Philadelphia, has a statue given by the Catholic Total Abstinence Society of America. Independence square, Philadelphia, has a bronze statue erected by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

Did John Barry belong to the Swiss navy, MacCartie?

REV. J. F. MCCAFFERY.

RAILROAD RATES.

Chicago, July 18.—Figure this out if you can: In order to bring about a return of prosperity the railroads are asking for, and in all probability will get, a 15 per cent increase in freight rates on all traffic. Agriculture may be prostrate, yet it is asked to bear an increase in rates. Did it ever occur to the master minds of the railroad world that perhaps they are suffering from surplus transportation, in much the same way that the farmers are suffering from excess production?

Certain leaders in industry and finance have predicated a return of prosperity upon a cut in wages and salaries. How do they reconcile a cut in wages with an increase in freight rates? Wages are to be slashed, but profits and rents are sacred and the status quo thereof must be maintained.

One sometimes wonders whether government in America has ceased to be the government of Lincoln and has become a government of, by, and for corporate interests. The writer holds no brief for the communists, Reds, I. W. W.'s, and others of that ilk, but he is thankful at times that individualism is a dominant characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon majority of our population.

HOODLUMS.

Chicago, July 17.—Last night about 8 to escape the heat my wife and myself parked our car at the foot of Chicago avenue. Soon after, a bunch of hoodlums came out of the water and got into a car [an open car] and undressed with the spotlight turned on them and shortly after this one roughneck about 20 stepped out of the car as naked as when he was born and played around with the rest of the scum between two parked cars while hundreds of machines were passing him only two feet away and hundreds of decent people all about.

If I had had a machine gun at that time I would have annihilated the whole damn bunch and have had no remorse about it later.

A NEIGHBORHOOD POOL.

Chicago, July 17.—Last evening after working all day in the heat I looked forward to a swim at the 113th street and Western avenue tank. When we arrived we were asked where we lived and when we told them the correct address we were told we lived out of the district, which ended at Sacramento avenue.

This is certainly beyond me, as we are part of Chicago and pay our taxes as well as the people in Morgan Park.

While Another Depicts the Troubles in India.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"A NIGHT of Death," by Marie Bregendahl [Knopf], can hardly be called a novel. It has no plot, no love interest. It simply depicts a mood. Translated from the Danish by Margery Blanchard, it pictures childhood's awakening to the mysteries of birth and death. But predominantly it is the study of a mood [or an emotion], that of apprehension and dread.

Over the entire book hangs this feeling of fear, this shrinking away from horror which must, nevertheless, be faced. Like a black cloud it shrouds the action of the story. All the characters move in it, and as the narrative continues, the fear increases and becomes more intense as the suspense is prolonged.

The eight little children of Anne Sven are first seen in a brief, happy moment, when, gathered about their mother, they eat their supper and chatter like a lot of little birds. They do not know that another baby is expected, but when they are hurried off to their grandmother's cottage and told their mother has suddenly been taken ill, the oldest ones anticipate the approaching event because they can remember the arrival of their youngest brother and sister.

Lisa, the oldest little girl, begins to be frightened and finally the fear spreads to all the others. The hours drag by for the children, who imagine all sorts of terrible things and tremble in agony at the thought of losing their mother.

The reader is shown the growing apprehension of these poor youngsters as they realize their mother is suffering, weakening and finally dying. From carefree, jolly little girls and boys they become in a night serious, solemn little people, miniature grown-ups, with all the lightness and gayety of youth flown away.

The author has drawn an extremely vivid picture of this Danish family, their home and their servants. There is a beautiful understanding of children, a sort of intuitive kinship with their minds, thoughts and feelings in "A Night of Death." The story is a tragic one, worked out with great artistic care. It is recommended to the reader who enjoys a tale purely of the mind.

Another recent book of an entirely different character is "I Tell Everything," by Edward Holton James. Its subtitle is "The Brown Man's Burden, a Book on India," and it was published in Geneva, Switzerland, but also in this country by Moss and Kimball, 23 Lexington avenue, New York City. It is a simply expressed, interesting account of the author's six months' sojourn in India, where he traveled up and down the country for over 10,000 miles. He saw and studied the civil disobedience campaign, which ended with the Delhi truce; the boycott, the picket, and the lathi charges.

Naturally, any record of recent events in India throws the spotlight on the much debated figure of Mahatma Gandhi, with whom Mr. James had several interviews. Indeed, he followed him through all the stirring events which took place in Allahabad, Delhi, and Karachi. He saw him immediately on his release from prison and went with him on the train that took him to Ahmedabad and the Kaira district. With James A. Mills of the Associated Press and William L. Shirer of THE TRIBUNE he hired a motor boat and followed Gandhi into the interior, beyond the reaches of the railroad.

Mr. James strives to relate events and to describe people in a neutral vein. Although he, like thousands of others, came under the spell of the little brown man, he also saw his inconsistencies, and mentions them.

He met Mirabai, the daughter of an English admiral, whose western name is Madeleine Slade, and who has given up her former life to become a disciple and disciple of Gandhi. His interview with her brings out many facts this reader has not read in any newspaper articles about this spectacular figure.

Two chapters are devoted to investigating the charges brought against the morality of India by Katherine Mayo in "Mother India." Photographs are given to illustrate the evidence Mr. James introduces into the controversy.

The problems of the native states, of Moslem-Hindu friction, of caste, purdah, and polygamy are also discussed. Must Britain lose India, and, if so, are the Indians capable of running their own affairs? Mr. James presents his viewpoint on these questions and on many others.

Iowa Couple Helps to Raise Camping Fund

Army Officer Sends His Yearly Contribution.

It may be good corn growing weather out in Iowa, but in Chicago temperatures in the 90's mean disaster in tenement homes.

Realizing that, two Iowans sent their gift yesterday to the Camp Algonquin fund. It was a check for $10, enough to send a mother away from the hot city to the cool Fox river camp, and it came from Mr. and Mrs. S. W. La Shelle of Marshalltown, Ia.

"We have noticed several of the recent items running in THE TRIBUNE regarding the Camp Algonquin for poor mothers of your city," the La Shelles wrote. "And it is with great pleasure that we enclose herewith a check for $10 for some poor mother to attend Algonquin for two weeks."

Every year comes a check from a man who wishes to be known only as Army Officer. Yesterday it arrived—$5 to be divided between the Algonquin and free ice fund.

"Permit me to assure you of my deep regret that I have not been able to send this check sooner. My best wishes to you in this and all other good work," he wrote.

Not all the letters coming to the cashier addressed to the two funds contain gifts. Many are from mothers requesting that their children be sent to the country, from children themselves hoping to go to camp, or from mothers asking ice for the sake of their babies. Yesterday brought a letter from a 10 year old boy.

"I have never been on a farm or in the country," wrote Patrick, who lives on the west side. "I would like very much to go. My daddy has been out of work for two years and my mother has been sick with tuberculosis and she just came home from the sanitarium. I have lost a lot of time at school on account of sickness. Please tell me where I can send my name so I can get to the country."

Every dollar that comes in either to the free ice or the Camp Algonquin fund helps. The funds are slowly growing, but not nearly as quickly as they should. Ice in tenement homes and summer vacations away from the city are needed twice as much this summer as last. The hardships of the winter have left their mark.

'Here's Cinder in Your Eye,' Chicago to Alice White

Chicago was a little rough with its greeting to little Alice White, motion picture actress, yesterday when she stepped off the Santa Fe Chief. A great big cinder put one of Alice's big blue eyes on the blink—temporarily—and claimed the center of attention during the first few minutes of her visit in the city.

BEG YOUR PARDON

It was incorrectly stated in THE TRIBUNE of July 24 that Mrs. Lina Blumenfeld, 1224 Lafayette avenue, an actress, was awarded a divorce from Herman Blumenfeld. Judge Philip Sullivan granted Mrs. Blumenfeld temporary alimony of $20 a week pending the hearing of the case. Mr. Blumenfeld was granted ten days to file a cross bill.

Through an error, a picture of Andrew W. Gatenbey, chief clerk of the board of review, was printed in THE TRIBUNE yesterday as that of August Gewecke, president of the Cook County Truck Gardeners' association, and that of Mr. Gewecke was printed as that of Mr. Gatenbey.

An item on the death of Walter J. Donovan stated he was the son of the late Col. Henry F. Donovan, founder of the Chicago Eagle, a political newspaper. John M. Donovan, managing editor of the Eagle, says Walter Donovan was the brother and not the son of Col. Donovan.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 28.—Mother love, the story theme that actresses delight to toy with, has recently troubled several famous actresses with real worry.

Part of the reason for Constance Bennett's present trip to Europe is to look for some means to get her 2 year old adopted son into the United States permanently. She legally adopted the baby in England in 1929. She has only been able to have him with her since then on an alien's non-quota visiting permit. Now the baby and its nurse are reported going to Canada to attempt to reënter the country under more favorable and permanent immigration rules.

Miss Bennett's problem, annoying as it is, is nothing to that of Vivian ["Eva"] Duncan, chained in Europe for four months since the birth of her daughter, Illymenia Evelyn Rosetta Duncan Asther, because the officials and rules of various nations are unable to decide if the baby shall come to this country as a native of Sweden, country of its father, Nils Asther, who is in Hollywood; of Germany, the land where the baby was born, or of America, land of the mother. Asther has applied for American citizenship. In an effort to have his baby declared an American, and admitted without a hitch at Ellis Island, copies of Asther's naturalization application, his certificate of marriage to Miss Duncan, and records of the mother's citizenship have been sent abroad to try to untie the red tape.

Prince Svasti, the rotund and jolly nobleman whose daughter is queen of Siam, will arrive in Chicago today, accompanied by Princess Svasti, their son, Prince Noi, and members of their retinue, for a visit of several days duration.

Unlike the shy and retiring King Prajadhipok, his son-in-law, Prince Svasti has an international reputation as a raconteur and wit. He has traveled widely in Europe and has visited the United States before his present trip, when he accompanied King Prajadhipok to this country that specialists might treat the king's eyes.

Under the guidance of Nathan William MacChesney, consul for Siam in Chicago, the prince and his party will visit the planetarium this morning. A lunch for the prince at the Tavern club, and one given for the princess at the Woman's Athletic club by Mrs. MacChesney, will be followed by a visit to the La Salle street financial district, a trip to the University of Chicago, and tea at the South Shore Country club. There will be a formal dinner this evening at the MacChesney home, 565 Hawthorne place.

Scarborough, N. Y., July 28.—(AP)—From the observation platform of a special train which was to bear them to Ottawa for a five weeks' tour of Canada, King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambaibarni of Siam tonight waved farewell to the people among whom they had lived in Westchester county for three months.

In the train were the private car for the royal couple, two 10 compartment cars for the 20 members of the retinue, a diner, and a baggage car full of trunks.

"Peter Ibbetson," New Opera, Monday at Ravinia

"Peter Ibbetson," opera in English by Constance Collier and Deems Taylor, will be given its first performance outside of New York at Ravinia next Monday evening. The work was brought out by the Metropolitan Opera company Feb. 3 of this year and promptly became the operatic hit of the season. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who sang in the Metropolitan production, will repeat their rôles of Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Peter Ibbetson, with Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson. The conductor will be Wilfrid Pelletier. Mr. Taylor, composer and co-librettist of the work, will come to Ravinia to hear the performance.

Woman Poet Depicts Island Without Toil

Eunice Tietjens Is Back from Pajeloia.

There is a spot in the South Sea islands where no one bothers to work, where food may be had for the taking. There the art of love making is perfected. The critical natives boo the American kissing as displayed every Friday in wild west movies.

EUNICE TIETJENS.

Eunice Tietjens, internationally known as a poet and writer of juvenile stories, came home yesterday from Pajeloia, in Moorea, one of the most inaccessible of islands of the Society group. She had spent the last ten months there with her husband, Cloyd Head, playwright and former manager of the Goodman theater, and their son, Marshal, 10 years old. The Heads went to the island to work on plays and stories. They soon found they were about the only inhabitants of the place who believed in work.

"The charm of the islanders lies in their perfected love making," she said. "They are at their best sitting around with flowers in their hair and wreaths about their shoulders, playing the ukelele.

The natives are fond of cowboy pictures which the half caste cinema operator has found to be the most pleasing to his Friday customers, but the natives start booing at kissing, which they think vulgar.

"I asked every one I knew in the island why kissing should be so distasteful. I finally found one native who said the natives just didn't think it was sanitary."

When a Polynesian girl is about twenty, Miss Tietjens continued, she picks out a boy friend she likes best and they settle down in a hut and remain faithful and happy. There is no marriage ceremony. They are very fond of children, but are so kind hearted that they will give a child away to friends' relatives who haven't any.

"Moorea is one of the most untouched ad most beautiful spots I have ever seen," she concluded. "Nothing happens. The natives are gentle and kind, no one hurries. There is no reason to hurry. During our ten months' stay I never came to the realization that the beautiful bay of Foatoia was real, its shape and vegetation are so exotic."

Another sojourner in far places is Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley [Mary Hastings Bradley]. Mrs. Bradley, with her husband and Dr. Harry A. Bigelow, dean of the University of Chicago law school, returned a few days ago from Africa.

"It may sound incredible," said Mrs. Bradley yesterday as she watched cutsoms' inspectors unpack the trophies, "but cannibals are the kindest and politest people on earth. The further from civilization we progressed the more polite people became. We shot no wild animals, except one elephant and some water buffalo."

D. F. Kelly New Director in Fight on Blindness

The election of D. F. Kelly, president of the Fair store, to the board of directors of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness was announced yesterday.

At the same time the society announced that it will seek through a campaign of education to accomplish the treatment of all new born babies' eyes to prevent blindness. A bill making that practice obligatory was passed by the last legislature, but vetoed by Gov. Emmerson.

Three new sight saving classes will be established in September in Chicago public schools by the society.

ARTISTS' GUILD AND AUTHORS' LEAGUE TO BE SEPARATE UNITS

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—The Artists' guild has severed connections with the Authors' League of America and since last Tuesday has been a separate legal entry, it became known today.

The separation, which merely confirms action taken in September, 1929, and is legally effective as from that date, came about through a desire for increased efficiency, Leroy Baldridge, illustrator and president of the guild, said today.

"Our work is very different from that of the league and we have found it more economical to keep separate offices," said Mr. Baldridge today.

The guild was founded ten years ago and almost at once joined with the Authors' league. About six years ago it branched out into selling its 400 members' work. This required specialists, and separate offices were maintained. Two years ago it was decided to split entirely, and last week the final details were arranged.

The guild still plans to coöperate with the league in all matters such as copyright legislation and still joins in keeping up the Authors' league fund for needy writers and artists.

Paris Styles Cheaper as Fashion Turns Back the Calendar

PARIS, July 28.—(AP)—Parisian dressmakers have cut the prices of dresses, coats and hats approximately 25 per cent from last winter's figures to meet demands of the present economic situation, the Associated Press learned today as fall fashion showing proceeded.

Commissionaries and representatives of the largest United States department stores, while refusing to cite instances of their own particular houses, joined in a declaration that a 25 per cent cut was generally evident.

"There are fewer buyers here than last July and they have less money to spend," said a representative of a large New York department store.

"Price cuts are necessary in these times of depression and these are possible through the price cuts made by fabric manufacturers."

Sweeping styles of many years ago, with flounced skirts, puffed sleeves, and trailing trains, marked the fall evening fashion showings of the medium sized courturiers today.

Ruby red evening gowns with low, square decolettes had wide, puffed shoulder sleeves. Black velvets were designed with twelve inch trains, lined with brick colored satin. Garnet red nets made over garnet taffeta slips had sweeping skirts finished at the hem with three four inch ruffles.

American Asks World's Women to Avert Wars

24 Nations Represented in Vienna Convention.

VIENNA, July 28.—(AP)—Business and professional women of 24 countries were urged here tonight by Lena Madesin Phillips of New York, president of their international congress, to work for disarmament and peace.

Asserting that women have proved themselves "equal to men in mental powers—even though we may not be their equals in experience," Miss Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, called on the delegates to bring about "the destruction of racial and economic barriers."

"This," she said, "is woman's hour—her hour to strike for the achievement of that which is closest to her heart—disarmament among the nations and peace throughout the world.

"Generations of women, patient and long suffering, have endured the horrors and the hardships which come from war. They have paid the greatest price in anguish and want and privation. They have given up their sons and husbands as a sacrifice to the gods of war.

"But today women have a new power. Millions of women in my own land, many more millions of women in Europe have the right of suffrage. In my country it is estimated that women control 85 per cent of the national expenditures. They have the voting power, the financial power. They could raise their voices against this holocaust of war and make them heard throughout the earth.

"Tonight, women of many nations, I appeal to you to abandon your attitude of conservatism, to break with tradition, to repudiate, if need be, your political affiliations, and to demand boldly that justice be done to all peoples and that war be made no more."

The sessions of the congress are being held in the palace of former Archduke Eugene. The convention was opened by Dr. Josef Resch, Austrian minister of social welfare. He testified to the efficiency of women, whose qualities of honesty and loyalty to ideals he had admired ever since as a young man he worked with women in factories and chose a wife from among the workers.

G. B. Stockton, United States minister to Austria, said he never was more impressed by woman's ability for world tasks than when he witnessed the manner in which Vienna women fed and tended 300,000 starving children after the collapse of Austria in the world war.

Yankees Find the Source of Orinoco River

First White Men There Tell Perils Are Told.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

TAMA TAMA, Upper Orinoco, Brazil, July 28.—The source of the Orinoco river no longer is enveloped in mystery. We have stood high up on a gigantic peak in the Parima range of mountains and have seen where the second largest river in South America, fed by myriad brooks, which emanate from the surrounding mountains, has its origin. The peak which is the site of our discovery, I have named for George G. Heye, the sponsor of this expedition.

There, at latitude 2:25:30 north and longitude 63:45:31 west—observations susceptible to correction—the river, which at some other points is more than four miles wide, is but a pigmy stream not over twenty feet in width. It is not navigable and this point, even by canoe as the deep gorge through which it flows is paved with rocks over which the waters tumble at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour.

We have traveled 312 miles beyond Esmeralda, the last civilized point on the river. It took us five weeks to cover the distance in a journey which has been something of an odyssey, where every imaginable privation, except thirst, has been encountered and overcome. The margin of victory at times, however, has been very light.

We have added over 100 miles to the previously recorded length of the Orinoco and have made a discovery of such startling geographical importance that I must be sure of it beyond the slightest risk of error before I put it in print.

We left our base with three heavy boats and one light canoe after passing through and by more than 100 rapids and waterfalls in our river course. Discarding most of our boats as we found them too heavy to drag through or around or over the impediments in the water, we arrived at the high point of our achievement with only one boat and this crowded with the five of us, the crew of fourteen, our instruments and our food.

The largest waterfall we saw is located at latitude 3:11 degrees north, longitude 64:15:45 degrees west. There the entire stream of the Orinoco rushes over a 40 foot drop. I have named this for a salient figure in the newspaper and exploration world, the Russell Owen cascade.

We thought for a while that there was a heaven. After suffering the pestilential attentions of black flies for 1,600 miles we rejoiced when the Parimas were reached, thinking that there were none of these insects there. Our happiness was of short duration. Mosquitos an inch long appeared, armed with weapons which seemed able to penetrate the stoutest khaki cloth, and were.

Game up to the time we missed our black flies was abundant, as were fish in the stream. Then when the flies disappeared so did the edible animals, fish and birds, and just when we needed fresh food most we found ourselves in a region bereft of everything but trees, rocks and the giant mosquitos.

Just above Russell Owen cascade our outboard motor, which up to then never had stopped of its own accord, suddenly ceased action at a most critical moment. The swift current carried us down to within fifty feet of the place where the river makes its 40 foot plunge before the motor could be made to function and carry us to safety.

There was one incident which gave us a temporary shock. The cook, the most important man on the expedition, one who could make something out of nothing, was washing dishes in the river one night. Suddenly there was a tremendous splash in the cannibal fish infested water.

In unison we emitted a cry of dismay: "The cook is in the river." Then we heard the cook's reassuring voice, "It wasn't me boss what went in. It was a tapir what came out," and at that moment a huge animal of this species galloped through the camp and into the woods beyond before any one could reach for a gun.

Insull Starts World's Fair Electric Hall

Samuel Insull, public utility magnate, gave the signal yesterday which started the first steam shovel at work for the electrical group, the fifth of the Century of Progress buildings. The ground breaking ceremony took place at the southern end of Northerly [Adler Planetarium] Island.

In the electrical group will be housed the exhibits of electricity, telephone and telegraph and radio. The building will be of steel framework with special wallboard exterior. White, yellow, red, black and blue will be the dominant colors. There will be hanging gardens and paved terraces. The building will be two stories high, 1,200 feet long, and 900 feet wide.

Among others attending the ceremony were Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Century of Progress; E. W. Lloyd, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company and former president of the National Electric Light association; E. D. Tillson, illuminating engineer, and R. F. Schuckardt, electrical engineer of the Commonwealth Edison company, and Capt Frank Roberts, representing the United States navy.

Plans to reproduce at the 1933 World's Fair a typical Chicago home of 1833, and to show its development into the de luxe apartment of the future, are being worked out by fair authorities with a special committee of the Chicago Real Estate board. It is proposed to erect four homes, one of the vintage of 1833, one of fifty years ago, one of twenty-five years ago, and one embodying the latest ideas for the home of the future.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Housekeeping Exposes.

In my home there is an old drop-head sewing machine that is used only occasionally. As it is in the dining room, I often drop things in it until I can take care of them. Rather than lay things on chairs and tables, all sorts of things find their way into the machine.

Early one morning the assessor called and I congratulated myself on the thought that my house was in perfect order.

"Madam, I'd like the number of your machine."

"Certainly," I replied, and raised the top. The contents that fell out were as varied as those in a small boy's pocket! It was useless to attempt an explanation to the amused assessor. A. M. T.

Sally Issues Calls for Letters About Next Movie Party

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Every boy and girl who hasn't done so and who wants to be invited to our party at the Oriental theater on Thursday, Aug. 6, had better write a letter to me at once. You know, every letter must be in my office by tomorrow morning so that I can select the names of the hundred young people who will accompany. They will be the group whose letters sound as if they would enjoy this party most.

I don't know how any one could help but have a good time at this particular show, however, for the program is brimful of interesting things. The picture, "Newly Rich," with Mitzie Green and Jackie Searl, will be a riotously funny one and these young players should feel right at home in it for it's all about a small boy and a small girl who have achieved such fame in Hollywood that they become known as the king and queen of the movies. It will be terribly exciting, too, with a kidnaping and with scenes of the sinister back streets of London's slums. There will be shots of the inside of a motion picture studio and others of the royal suite of a London hotel.

And when the picture is finished, there will be a stage show to entertain us—an orchestra with Al Kvale as its leader, a ballet, and Alice White, the movie star, whom you are all looking forward to meeting, I know. Surely you don't want to miss any of this—it's just too grand. That's why I want you to get started at those letters and have them in my office by tomorrow morning.

Don't forget to include your name, address and age, and send them to Sally Joy Brown, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Request for Wheel Chair.

"I know an old man who is unable to walk and must remain in doors all the time. He'd give anything for a wheel chair, and it occurred to me that you might be able to get one for him." J. R.

On warm summer days, instead of being cooped up within four walls this elderly man could be out enjoying the sunshine, if he had a wheel chair. If you no longer have need of yours, won't you give it to him?

Asks for Fishing Equipment.

"I am writing you in behalf of my husband, who is a disabled war veteran. Friends have offered to take him to Wisconsin on a fishing trip, and I wonder if one of your readers has a game fishing outfit to give him. I know he would be overjoyed to receive it. Mrs. B. A."

Cosmetic Latitude of Youth Is Restricted as Years Pass Along

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The things that one can do when very young and the same things that one cannot do when not so very young are many. But for today's sermon we'll just take a few of them.

First, the matter of lipstick use. When you're young you can pile on great gobs of red and put it on hurriedly, forgetting to smooth it over with a clever fingertip. And it's ten to one, it will only look like the improvidence of youth, or at worst, its recklessness. But let an older woman swab her lips heavily with the paint stuff in a high-toned glistening color, and she'll look hard with the same hardness that a pair of badly made up eyes endow an otherwise nice person.

Mouths have a way of flattening or doing something with that fresh, warm, kissable contour of earlier years. Anyway, the contour is not just as young as it used to be. Perhaps a habit of keeping the corners drawn down pulls hard on the lip curve. Or, the shape changes slightly as bone structure seems to with the added years.

Anyway, the older woman has to be gentle with the lipstick—and talented in the use of it so there will be no hard line of lip. The dullish, light-ish shades are best in coloring and a softness of line must be struggled for.

Another thing the very, very young may do is to pile mascara heavily on lower lash and upper and the worst you'll say about the wayward looking miss is that she hasn't a very wise mother. The older woman, under like mascara circumstances, will set folk to wondering just what kind of past that lady had and why she took such a hard road along it. Light mascara application, then, on the upper lashes and none on the lower for those who've passed the border line.

Yet another privilege allotted to youth which maturity had better forego is setting the chapeau down straight and regular over the brow. This isn't being done so much any more because the hats, outside of sailors are tiptilted for all. But the older woman putting her hat on straight, with nary a tilt to right or left, looks the formidable cop out to catch all miscreants.

There were plenty of rooters for the Cubs at Wrigley field yesterday, but none who cheered more earnestly than 150 boys and girls, ages 8 to 12 years, from the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium. For days the children who are patients in the Preventorium have looked forward to the promised ball game, and yesterday were ready long before the busses arrived at the sanitarium grounds. They were still talking about the game after it was over.

FLOWER OF THORNS

By Marie Conway Oemler.

SYNOPSIS.

Sally Rutherford, the last of a proud old southern family, following the ruin and death of her grandfather, determines to keep the heavily mortgaged Oakleigh plantation for her grandmother. She opens a hot dog stand on the Dixie highway. The estate of Winstead, of carpetbagging stock, adjoins Oakleigh. Henry Winstead holds the Oakleigh mortgage. His only son, Sam, is a great help to Sally, although she doesn't know it, and no real identity until the stand is successfully started. Sally falls in love with Lowndes Rupert and believes herself to be his promised wife. Sam forces Lowndes to admit, in front of Sally, that he is engaged to the wealthy Gertrude Reinert. Sam asks Sally to marry him, although he knows she doesn't love him. Sally decides to accept his offer.

INSTALLMENT XXI.

THE BETROTHED.

"I haven't seen you since you were a child," Grandmamma told Sam, still holding his hand. "So I'm afraid you really don't know me, Mr. Winstead."

"Sam," he corrected, smiling at her.

"And so we have to get acquainted with each other, haven't we, Sam? But we have one great bond in common—we both love Sally."

"It is a great bond, Mrs. Rutherford. It not only makes us acquainted right away; it makes us truly understand each other, doesn't it?"

"You can't imagine how startled I was when she came in this afternoon and told me she was going to marry you! I was all but stunned!"

"You don't know how happy I was when she told me the same thing," said the young man, with a faint smile. "Now, as you and I must get acquainted, and I know more about you than you do about me, shall I tell you something of myself, Mrs. Rutherford?"

"You might say 'Grandmamma,'" said she unexpectedly. It all but took Sally's breath away. Never had she heard her grandmother make so friendly an offer to anybody in all her life. She was gentle, she was exquisitely polite, but she had always been more or less formal, keeping a certain definite distance between herself and all others—and here she was making the extraordinary offer of Sam Winstead!

"Grandmamma, would you care to have me talk a little about me, then? It's somewhat of a bore, but maybe it will give you a line on me."

"It won't bore me, Sam. I want to hear all about you," she smiled.

So Sam told his interested listener about school, and travels, and the Winstead dairies, and the college friends who helped him run them, and how the dairies were succeeding even beyond his expectations.

"It—it all sounds vastly interesting, and important, and—and very, very modern," she admitted. "If that is what you want, I am sure that it is going all right! Now you must forgive me if I—I seem—somewhat bewildered by this whole affair. Sally never told me anything about you until she informed me that she meant to marry you! That would surprise even grandmothers not so old fashioned as I, wouldn't it? You must talk the matter over with the Colonel when he comes home."

"When I see the Colonel, he and I will have a satisfactory talk about Sally," said the young man, in a low tone. "I am sure he will understand me—that I—have her welfare at heart, even as himself."

"Sam," he corrected, smiling at her.

"I am sure of that," said the old lady. "I feel it in my heart. Yes, heart will understand."

"I hope so, indeed," said Sam.

Sally made a slight movement, stirring in her chair. The young man raised his head and looked at her fixedly. It was as if he were making a promise to the Colonel. She was painfully moved.

"I may take it, then, that you yourself approve, dear lady? That you give your consent?" the young man asked.

"My dear boy, yes. Of course you must see Colonel Rutherford, but I know that I am speaking for him as well as myself when I say that we are willing to trust you with our most precious possession."

Sam lifted the old hand to his lips, a beautiful gesture of deference, a solemn promise.

"We shall have to ask you to allow us to fix the date quite soon, Grandmamma," he said. "I don't see the necessity for a lengthy engagement, do you?"

"Sally herself shall settle that, naturally," said Mrs. Rutherford. "I remember Rupert was opposed to long engagements—wouldn't hear of it, insisted on our marriage within ten weeks of our engagement. I hardly had time to get my trousseau ready. But I never regretted the haste."

Then she was kissed by her pale granddaughter, and told to take her self away, and was bidden au revoir by her tall new grandson, and the pair left her in Essie's care. Essie, who had heard a few words, was goggle-eyed with excitement. Miss Sally was going to be married to Mr. Sam Winstead!

Sally, having decided, was restlessly anxious to carry the thing through. What was the use of waiting? Was Lowndes to be allowed to think her calling at home, crushed to earth by his defection? Before he could make a move, before she heard anything more of, or from him, she desired her own world to be told, spread broadcast. She told Sam, briefly, that she thought announcement might as well be made at once. And thus it came about that, within the week, Mrs. Rupert Ashley Middleton Rutherford announced the engagement and approaching marriage of her granddaughter, Sarah Delmore Rutherford, to Mr. Samuel Forman Winstead.

The news created something of a sensation. It was thought a very peculiar arrangement. The bride-to-be was very pretty. She was Col. Rutherford's granddaughter, and altogether a darling girl; but the groom was Henry Winstead's only son, one of the most promising young men in the state, the consensus of opinion was that even a Rutherford did well to marry young Sam Winstead.

All the Rutherford friends rushed out to Oakleigh to express their pleasure. They were genuinely delighted—they had been distressed and worried over the Rutherford catastrophe, the consequent reversal of Sally's fortunes, and the sad case of her grandmother. Sally was gallant. She had taken hold and was working out her own fortune in a way that compelled respect, but it wasn't any easy way for a Rutherford woman. Now that she was to join forces with the Winstead fortune, the Rutherford misfortunes were at an end! How delightful, how romantic, how perfect, that the poor Colonel's granddaughter and Henry Winstead's son should fall in love.

The young people that she had been associated with since childhood came to see her and wish her joy. Her friend Anne Cochrane cried with sheer delight and relief. To her, the clouds had rolled away and the sun was shining again!

"O, Sally!" she exclaimed with tears in her eyes. "I'm so happy for you! He's the only young man I know that is really worthy of you! It's all I could have prayed for. I'm really satisfied, I'm in a 'Bless-you-my-children' state of mind, I'm ecstatic! Maybe I'm even a little envious!" she added. "Of course, I'm to be bridesmaid! Lordy, I'll be so proud!"

Hazel Lucas was even franker.

"You lucky little cat!" she cried, kissing the bride-to-be. "Think of having the most fascinating little shop in the world—and then nabbing Winstead. You're hand-in-hand with Lady Luck, Sally Rutherford, that's what you are." Her gay voice suddenly softened. "O, Sally, dear, I'm glad! I hope you'll be perfectly happy—and honest, honey, I don't see how any one could fail to be happy with Sam Winstead. I've always had a sweet spot for Sam Winstead myself."

Then presents began to pour in. It seemed as if everybody who knew or cared wished to show their relief and pleasure in this fortunate termination of the Rutherford affairs, and Sally was inundated with wedding presents.

From this general chorus of rejoicing, one voice was absent: Lowndes. Lowndes sustained a ghastly shock when he heard that Sally, whom he was sure loved him alone, was so suddenly engaged to Sam Winstead. He suffered a devouring jealousy, a helpless rage, a torturing desire. Never had he wanted the girl so much, never had she seemed so dear and desirable as now, when she was definitely out of his reach. It did not add to his comfort to know that it was gladly admitted that Sally was making a very good thing. Sam Winstead was considered a most desirable part!—very much more so than he himself was. He had meant to marry Gertrude Reinert, and had meant to give Sally up—but—he loved her, he desired her! It tortured him to think of somebody else having her. So Lowndes went among his friends with a pale and drawn face and a preoccupied air; his smile was forced. If he had dealt Sally a blow, she—or rather Sam Winstead—had dealt him a deadlier one in return. He was the victim of shame, rage, despair, jealousy. Lowndes was called upon to pay a heavy price.

Of this Sally knew nothing. She had steeled her heart to the inevitable. She told herself that she was saving Oakleigh for Grandmamma, that she was, in a measure, redeeming poor Grandpapa's tragic errors; but she could not but flinch from the price she was called upon to pay. Nor could she at once forget Lowndes. False, cruel, weak—even dishonorable—she had loved him too much to erase his beautiful image, at will, from her heart. She despised herself, but she found herself clinging to thoughts of him. It clung to her a ghastly infidelity that he should marry another woman, when his love was hers. And that destiny called upon her to marry another man filled her with despair. There were moments when she lay in her bed in the middle of the night, staring into the dark with burning eyes, when her approaching marriage filled her with real terror. Only the thought of Grandmamma asleep in her accustomed room, waiting with happy expectation for Grandpapa's return tomorrow kept her courage to the sticking point. Why had she and Lowndes met, why had he been allowed to torture her? Why? Why? Why should she love Lowndes, even now? Why couldn't she love Sam Winstead?

Paris Takes Thought of the Business Girl

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The business woman who aspires to appear impeccably dressed, in and out of business hours on one outfit a day, has a worthy ambition. She has, also, a problem that makes the labors of Hercules look like mudpie play. What looks right in an office is more than apt to ruin a girl's chances for success in the after hours of ease, and this statement can be reversed without losing its sad truth.

This summer, however, fashion has been particularly kind to the girl who works in an office. Women who have nothing to do but dress have refused the elegant afternoon programs of the Paris dressmakers, and have made it fashionable to be simply clothed in the after office hours of a girl's life.

The business woman with a big date after office hours can avail herself of the turncoat ensemble which is being worn by distinguished women of leisure, and she will be dressed with the best of them. The two color ensemble style of this summer is achieved by simply turning the jacket of a discreet business outfit. A change of gloves and the transformation is complete. The Redfern ensemble, sketched today, is an example of this. It has a dress of black crêpe georgette that has long straight sleeves, and is relieved by a small knotted scarf of white georgette at the neck.

The jacket is black georgette on the outside and white georgette on the inside. For business it is worn black side out, and the white shows only in the ripples down the front, and the cuffs of the short sleeves. After business hours you turn the coat, and it is all white and very dressy. White gloves complete it.

Chicagoans Return.

Miss Palandech and Charles J. Gallagher to Marry on Saturday

Next Saturday is the day set for the wedding of Veronica Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Palandech of 7617 Phillips avenue. She will become the bride of Charles J. Gallagher, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Gallagher, at 11:30 a. m., at St. Bride's church. There nuptial high mass will be solemnized. A reception for relatives and friends will be held at the Blackstone hotel following the ceremony.

Miss Palandech will wear an empire style princess lace gown in which her mother was presented at the court of King Nicholas of Montenegro in 1910. The cap of her tulle veil is trimmed with the same lace and orange blossoms adorn the train. Her bridal bouquet will be of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Catherine Palandech, the maid of honor, will wear an aquamarine satin dress, with a large maline hat, shoes and gloves of the same shade. She will carry talisman roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Jeanne O'Connell of Indianapolis, Miss Elizabeth Grant, Miss Grayce Cahill, Mrs. Andrew C. Powers Jr., and Mrs. John P. Rooney, will wear coral satin dresses and aquamarine hats, shoes and gloves similar to Miss Palandech's. Their bouquets will be of Johanna Hill roses and delphinium.

James P. Gallagher will be best man and the ushers will be Albert P. Nelson, John J. Mortimer, Charles W. De Gryse, Dr. Earl H. Crawshaw, and John T. Gallagher, another brother of the bridegroom-to-be.

Mrs. Palandech will wear a beige lace dress with a hat of the same material and Mrs. Gallagher a pearl gray georgette. They will wear corsages of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Palandech will give the bridal dinner at the Shoreland tomorrow evening.

Teachers Are Urged to Be More Active in World's Affairs

Denver, Colo., July 28.—(AP)—Teachers of America were chided for their failure to assume their full social responsibilities in an address by Henry R. Linville, of New York, president of the American Federation of Teachers. He spoke at the fourth biennial conference of the World Federation of Education associations tonight.

"As long as the teachers of the country are willing to sit back supinely and question nothing," Linville said, "no challenge is made of their work."

Other speakers were Loftus H. Reid, of the Toronto, Canada, board of education; Robert Neilly, president of the Irish Teachers' organization and R. Bennett Miller, president of the Educational Institute of Scotland.

The illiteracy department of the conference today brought together a colorful group composed of a 70 year old woman, a native of Russia who started to read and write when she was 63; an Indian brave, gorgeous in feather and buckskin and a Negro woman from Georgia.

"There is no difference between us, except in color," said the Indian, Little Blaze. "We Indians scalp our enemies. You pale faces skin your friends."

Grotesque Pictures Deserve No Place in Child's Library

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

We were talking of children's books, one afternoon.

"I can remember a beautifully illustrated copy we had of the 'Arabian Nights'," said my friend. "I used to love the pictures and I wanted to look at them, but I didn't dare because as I turned each page I was afraid I would come upon a certain dreadful picture. The first time I saw that picture I couldn't sleep at night. And I can well remember that I wouldn't stay alone in the same room with that book. Children go through a lot that no one knows or suspects. I didn't tell any one about that particular fear."

There are many beautiful children's books that are not beautiful books for children.

Many stories, too, are called children's stories and often they are given indiscriminately to children of all ages. Actually they may be suitable for a child of twelve and horrifying for a child of five. But it is particularly in regard to the illustrations that I want to warn mothers of young children today.

The fact that a book is illustrated by a famous artist may mean that the pictures in themselves are beautiful, but it does not guarantee their suitability for children's eyes. When you buy a book, regardless of who has recommended it, look it over with critical eyes. If there is anything very grotesque or terrifying in it, don't get it.

You can't always be sure how things will affect little children. Sometimes you will be surprised to find a child distressed or frightened by one picture in a book that you would have thought above reproach. I have sometimes found it necessary to tear out just one illustration. A few years later they themselves will be amused as having minded it.

Food Talk.

Mrs. F. L. writes, "My tapioca puddings and boiled custards always curdle. Will you tell me how to prevent this?"

There are several reasons why milk and egg combinations curdle. When milk is skimmed and when it is slightly acid, it curdles easily. If milk is added to the egg at too high a temperature and too rapidly, curdling is sure to occur. Skimmed milk or one that is practically free from fat curdles much more readily than one that contains the cream, because the fat particles distributed through the milk have an emulsifying effect which keep the protein of the milk [the constituent which forms the curd] in a more stable condition.

Egg yolk is also an emulsifying agent as well as a thickening agent, and the effect of the yolk on the milk is to produce a smooth creamy emulsion. Egg white which is also rich in protein, but has little emulsifying properties, curdles even more readily than milk when it is exposed to heat. The tendency, then, is for egg white to hasten the curdling of milk rather than to retard it. So the cook who adds only the egg yolks to the hot milk and the tapioca mixture and then cooks it until thick, folding in the stiffly beaten egg whites last, is following a safer course than the one who adds the whole egg to the hot milk-tapioca mixture.

To prevent curdling in a boiled custard, add the cold milk to the cool beaten eggs, and place over cold water in the lower part of the double boiler. Heat gradually, stirring constantly. Just as soon as the custard begins to thicken, remove from the fire and beat until smooth. The egg milk mixture should be completely coagulated at a temperature around 168 degrees F.

The slow uniform heating prevents some parts of the mixture from becoming hotter than others and the result is that the whole mass reaches the coagulation point at once, making a smooth creamy thickened mass. The only reason that this same method cannot be used for tapioca pudding is that tapioca will not cook sufficiently in the time required for cooking milk and eggs. A different method of handling therefore is essential.

CRABMEAT SALAD.

1 cup crabmeat
1 cup julienned celery
2 hard cooked eggs
1½ tablespoons green pepper
2 tablespoons sweet pickle
2 tablespoons pimiento
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup mayonnaise

Remove the flat bony pieces from the crabmeat and flake with a fork. Add celery, diced eggs, chopped pepper, pickle, pimientos, salt, paprika, lemon juice, and mayonnaise. Toss lightly so as not to mash the salad. More dressing may be desired. Keep very cold until ready to serve.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Louise loved big juicy ears of sweet corn, but had never seen it growing until her uncle took her for a ride to his field of corn. When she came home she said to her father, "O, daddy, Uncle Bob has the mostest big tall little green trees that shed sweet corn."

Forced Economy Era Testing Period for Young Sweethearts

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"A communication in your column startled me. It sounded like my son and his Helen. He is such a fine boy, but so depressed because of present conditions. The girls of today require so much entertainment, and any money the boy makes must be for that purpose. Helen has a good position and a small car. He keeps the car in condition and works for her father and for us. He keeps up a five thousand life insurance for her.

"We try to keep up his morale by supplying him with good clothes. We love his sweetheart and do want them to be happily married when they can afford it. This is probably a common situation now. How I long for some one to advise them just how to keep their love, and sanely wait for work and prosperity.

"AN ANXIOUS MOTHER."

The above brings up the question of just how much parents should do in a situation of the kind. Are they doing the wise thing in encouraging the boy to spend his all on the girl? Or, wouldn't it be better to give the girl a little pre-marriage taste of periods in which her entertainment will not be the vital issue.

There's one prophesy you can make about the girls who see with clear eyes the current financial handicap under which their beaus may be operating. It is that they going to be far better matrimonial bets than the girls who keep on exacting the last farthing be spent on them.

Among this latter group, not all are as inconsiderate as painted. If the boy insists upon keeping up a front, at his parents' expense or otherwise, how is the girl to know that there is any financial problem?

It's a perfect "test" period for sweethearts — this era of forced economy. I think parents might be wiser to let their sons inform their girls that economy for the time being is necessary, instead of encouraging them to keep up a front to which they are not honestly entitled.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Let Him Do the Asking.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a fellow and I would like to go out with him. Please advise how to ask him for a date. PIPI."

You may do what you can to attract him and so encourage his attention, but let him make the dates.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friends saw the girl I like with other fellows. She denies it. Should I believe my friends or her? "IN DOUBT."

FARM AND GARDEN
BY PAUL POTTER

PLANT TURNIPS NOW.

Home gardeners who like to harvest their sulphur and iron in the shape of turnips, and truck farmers who find the turnip easily makes a second crop on acreages that have already done service in producing early radishes, onions or similar garden truck, can plant their turnips any time now and expect a good crop.

"Twenty-fourth of July, wet or dry," is an old saying applicable to turnips, according to W. B. Ward, vegetable gardening specialist of Purdue university. Sixty to 80 days are required for maturity, he finds, but a few days in planting now will make but little difference in the fall.

Seed required for turnips varies as to whether planting is in rows or broadcast. For those who wish to plant a row 100 feet long, Mr. Ward suggests a half ounce of seed. One pound will suffice for an acre if the truck farmer uses a drill, but if the seed is broadcast twice as much will be required. The crop is stored easily in root cellars or outdoor pits.

REMAP OF WARDS BRINGS RIDDLE TO COMMITTEEMEN

They Wonder Who They Are Talking For.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Philosophers among the Republican and Democratic ward committeemen, known to the frivolous as "ward comedians," concentrated their intellects yesterday upon a new problem, "what does a committeeman represent?" At the rooms of the election board there were prolonged debates over whether the ward leaders speak for the old wards in which they were elected last year or for the new wards into which the city council has recently divided the city. County Judge E. K. Jarecki has been asked for an opinion.

The debate arose over the hypothetical question of what would happen if a special judicial election were called and the political committees had to pick nominees. No such election is on the calendar, but the metaphysicians pointed out that anything might happen. Prevailing opinion at the election commission was that the ward committeemen will represent the old wards until new committeemen are elected from the new wards in April.

Tenth Again Pops Up.

Meanwhile the new Tenth congressional district again popped up in the day's political grist. Charles West, an insurance broker, issued the platform on which he will seek the Republican nomination against Congressman Carl R. Chindblom next April. Mr. Chindblom's friends have been advising him to move into Lake county and run in the new 13th. They contend that Mr. Chindblom, a dry of drys, was cast adrift by the remap in a wet district without even a pair of rubber boots.

"Problems confronting residents of the 10th district," says Mr. West in his platform, "are a criterion on which to base future national legislation. It will be my task to seek the introduction of measures to safeguard savings, secure federal appropriations for public improvements for Chicago as a means of reducing unemployment, and to remedy existing inqualities in income tax legislation which are proving such a burden to the small merchant, the independent manufacturer, the office worker and the profesional man and woman.

"By a tremendous majority, the people in the Tenth district have on several occasions expressed their choice for modification of the 18th amendment. They demand a change in the Volstead act so that consumption of alcoholic beverages can be legalized. They insist upon the eradication of the bootlegger, the corrupt public official, and other lawbreakers foisted upon the nation through this farcical act."

Mr. West, one of the organizers of the Rogers Park Civic league, was in the headlines in 1929 through his activities in organizing a protest meeting of the American Legion held in a downtown theater against the action of congress in opposing appropriations for hospitals for tubercular and neuropsychiatric war veterans, which was followed by favorable action in Washington.

BRUCE CAMPBELL GETS INTO RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Belleville, Ill., July 28.—(AP)—Bruce A. Campbell, East St. Louis attorney and long a prominent figure in Democratic politics, announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor here tonight. He announced his candidacy at a meeting at which the St. Clair county Democratic committee unanimously indorsed him.

Campbell announced he would run on the same platform used by the Democrats in the 1930 campaign when James Hamilton Lewis defeated Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican, in the United States senatorial race. The platform called for repeal of the 18th amendment.

J. S. Blackton, Film Man, Files Bankruptcy Suit

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—(AP)—J. Stuart Blackton, pioneer motion picture director and producer, filed a voluntary bankruptcy schedule in United States District court here today. He listed assets of $12,987.35 and liabilities of $903,264.68, and accompanied the schedule with a pauper's oath stating he is entirely without funds to defray expenses of the action. Most of the liabilities, he said, consist of unsecured claims, judgments and notes held by banks.

Two Park Districts Vote to Consolidate in Cicero

The Clyde and Cicero park districts in Cicero voted to consolidate yesterday. They will be governed hereafter by the five Clyde park board members as the Clyde-Warren park district. The Hawthorne park district voted to remain independent. The village board had hoped to consolidate all three park districts under the Clyde park board.

OFFICIALS FIND LAW BROKEN AT FARMERS' MART

BY PAUL POTTER.

An inspection of the Randolph street produce market, extending westward from Des Plaines street, yesterday disclosed to examiners for the city controllers office and the Cook County Truck Gardeners' association that flagrant violations of the city market ordinance still exist.

AUGUST GEWECKE.

This market under the city code is reserved for farmers in Cook and nearby counties who grow their own fruits and vegetables for the Chicago trade. Recently, however, these farmers have complained that hucksters selling left over produce from commission houses have usurped the better locations in the market.

August Gewecke, president and George Stell, secretary of the truck gardeners' organization, which includes 1,900 farmers in Cook, Du Page and Will counties, were accompanied on the inspection trip yesterday by Inspector Fitzpatrick from City Collector M. S. Szymczak's office. Action is to be taken at once on their report, the details of which were not made public.

Find Hucksters in Market.

It was found yesterday that "scalpers" and hucksters who brought in vegetables from other markets to be sold as "home grown" had taken up the most of two blocks on the market's east end. The farmers, unable to remain all day to hold positions, have been obliged to move westward along the recently widened street.

Typical of the ordinance violations seen yesterday was the case of an old truck, bearing a fictitious grower's name, but which had no motor, and no vehicle license tags. It stood in front of 838 West Randolph street, where the market master, Joseph Gordon, has passed it repeatedly on his rounds. When the street is cleaned, in late afternoon, the truck is wheeled to the curb, then taken back the next day to take from some farmer his legal position.

Disabled Trucks Found.

Another old truck stood in front of 903 West Randolph street, without license tags, either state or city. The steering wheel and hood were covered with a blanket to conceal the disabled condition of the car.

Another empty truck, bearing the name of S. P. Gerdl, stood parallel to the surface car tracks in front of 802 West Randolph street. It bore no license tags. Another was using two stalls nearby under the name of H. Lang. This truck bore a Wisconsin 1930 license.

Limousines and other cars and trucks belonging to commission men and others have taken up nearly half of two entire blocks which the ordinance reserves for farmers. Vendors with city tags, others without state licenses but bearing a Stickpey vehicle tag, take up corner spots and other favorable locations, in open violation of the market code.

"We are taking steps to correct this situation," declared Controller Szymczak yesterday. "Of course, some farmers are to blame for selling their produce to these hucksters, thereby giving them some home grown stuff to help carry on their business. We are also interested in correcting the evils on Randolph street as a protection to the public who come to buy what they suppose is strictly fresh home grown produce."

HOOVER THINKS TARIFF BOARD WILL MAKE NEEDED RATE CHANGES

Washington, D. C., July 28.—(AP)—President Hoover was said at the White House today to believe the tariff commission under Chairman Fletcher has proved "it can and will make all proper and necessary adjustments" in tariff rates.

This statement was made in announcing the chairman had acceded to the request of the President that he remain until Nov. 15 instead of retiring Sept. 16 as was his plan.

The President believes, the White House said, "that Mr. Fletcher and the members of the commission have performed a valuable public service in putting the commission on an efficient operating basis, where it is commanding the confidence of the public in the absolutely fair and impartial administration of its important duties."

Mr. Fletcher last week announced that as he had accepted the chairmanship for only a year he would retire Sept. 16.

PICK JURY TO TRY MULTI-MARRIED BRAKEMAN PERRY

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Eagle River, Wis., July 28.—[Special.]—A tentative jury of five farmers, three merchants, two summer resort owners, a retired salesman and a woman were expected here today to try George W. E. Perry, multi-married Milwaukee brakeman, for the murder July 6, 1930, of his third and bigamous wife, Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett, saleswoman for the subscription department of the Chicago Art institute.

GEORGE W. PERRY.

Thirty veniremen of Vilas county were examined in the broiling court room, made blistering by the sun beating on its tin sides fashioned to resemble stone. Twelve were excused for having formed definite opinions. Six were dismissed after the state and defense employed 3 of their 12 preimptory challenges. After the panel was exhausted Circuit Judge C. M. Davison of Beaverdam, Wis., instructed Sheriff Thomas McGregor to bring in more venirmen. It was indicated that the present jury with two exceptions will stand.

The state is to call 15 witnesses to weave a net of circumstantial evidence by which District Attorney Edmund H. Dreger hopes to send Perry to a life term at Waupun penitentiary.

Before Superior Judge Sterling Pomeroy of Cook county, Perry married Mrs. Kathryn Gebhart Perry of Cleveland, Jan. 3, 1930. Six months later before the same judge he married Mrs. Hackett, a former school teacher in Milwaukee and widow of Charles F. Pullen, one of the organizers of the Germania bank of Milwaukee and Hackett a secret service man.

Perry met Mrs. Hackett through a "blind ad" in which he asked for a traveling companion on a motor trip to California. Perry, who is 40 years old, represented himself as a ne'er-do-well son of a wealthy California family. They were married June 13, 1930, after a courtship of a few weeks. He had said he was to inherit $300,000 if he married a respectable woman and entered business.

On July 6, according to the state, witnesses are to testify, Perry borrowed a rifle from Parker, saying he wished to do a "little shooting." The bride and bridegroom left together. A few hours later Perry returned alone, paid his bill, packed Mrs. Hackett's clothes, and drove away in her car. This was the last time Mrs. Hackett was seen alive.

SOX' 11 RUN RALLY IN 8TH BEATS YANKS, 14-12

WESTLAND LEADS U. S. AMATEUR GOLF TRIALS

SOLVES WIND'S CAPERS TO TURN IN 150 TOTAL

162 Qualifying Limit at Onwentsia.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Jack Westland, the slender blond boy from Sunset Ridge, is the type of golfer who always is turning up at some tournament or other and walking away with whatever honors are to be had. Yesterday he called around to the Onwentsia club out at Lake Forest, where the Chicago district eliminating round for the national amateur championship was being held, and shot a 150 to win the medal.

Westland's score, the ingredients of which were a 76 in the morning and a 74 in the afternoon, was the best enough up to the scorers' big board out of a field of 160 and headed the list of Chicago qualifiers for the national tournament proper, which will begin at the Beverly Country club on Aug. 3 and continue through Sept. 5. Yesterday's round at Onwentsia was one of 36 played throughout the country, and was the first time this system of preliminary qualification had been applied to the amateur meet.

Wind Handicaps Field.

Par at Onwentsia is 71, so that Westland's card was eight strokes over the prescribed figure, but the wind conditions were such that Jack's and the scores of those following him might be called nearly perfect. A kind of mischievous breezes which whipped around the starters' tee early in the morning accompanied some of the threesomes throughout the day, causing their drives and iron shots to describe half boomerangs and usually land in rough or traps.

Westland and his fellow leaders appeared to have solved this problem on the first nine holes of the afternoon round, but a majority of the boys didn't find some peculiar numbers appeared on the final score cards when the last threesome came in, which was considerably after 6 o'clock.

Two years ago Westland dropped in on the French amateur meet and came away with the title. This year he's been making visits to various invitational tournaments and has been doing well.

Such a home club golfer to follow Westland in the matter of subduing par was the rule. He was Dexter Cummings, former national intercollegiate champion, who shot a 76 in the afternoon, which added to his 75 of the morning gave him a total of 151.

Coach Ties Cummings.

Incidentally, Glen View did quite well yesterday, placing three among the first five qualifiers. In addition to Couch, there were John D. Ames, former Princeton university golf captain, and Alden B. Swift, each of whom came through with 152 to share honors for third place. Swift's performance was undoubtedly the best of the lot, for after having a rather difficult 80 in the morning he returned in the afternoon, brushed the frisky breezes aside and shot 72, one over par, for the best 18 holes round of the day.

Westland had only two birdies on the card, a 3 on the sixth in the morning and a deuce on the short fifth in the afternoon, but he clung quite consistently to par throughout. Swift's afternoon round included birdies on the third and fifth, these canceling

MULLEN LOSES LICENSE; FAILS TO PAY HUDKINS

Following his failure to answer its summons, Jim Mullen was deprived of his promoter's license by the Illinois State Athletic commission at its regular meeting yesterday.

Mullen had been called following complaint by Clyde Hudkins, brother manager of Ace Hudkins, that the Nebraska fighter had not been paid for his bout with King Levinsky.

Hudkins' complaint stated his brother's share of the $6,750.05 receipts amounted to $1,950 and that Mullen had disappeared.

THAT'S NO BUGGY HORSE, MISTER—THAT'S IRONSIDES

BY FRENCH LANE.

All that excitement about Ironsides the other day, when he had been purposely left at the post and the Arlington Jockey club played the part of Mr. Goodfellow by refunding some $10,000 wagered on the ne'er do well son of Man o' War, may have been just so much lost motion.

Ironsides started in the Decatur purse at Arlington yesterday and a lot of folks who thought he had been given a terribly raw deal in his previous effort plunged on him. Then what did he do?

Footmark Makes the Pace.

He couldn't hardly get up a gallop and ran out of the money with such a noted jockey as Bobby Jones on his back. Ironsides was just a shadow of the Ironsides that only a year or so ago beat noted stake horses. He wilted under the dazzling pace the supposedly weak hearted Footmark made for a mile and finished beaten off by nearly a dozen lengths.

Footmark carried only 95 pounds and was ridden by E. M. McLaughlin, an apprentice, who didn't know what the winner's circle looked like not long ago. Yet Footmark made the pace all the way, and when Uluniu came up to challenge in the last furlong and got within a few inches of the lead, Footmark put on more speed and went on to win by a neck from the fast finishing Uluniu. He ran his mile in 1:36 1-5, which isn't standing still at all.

It was much too fast for temperamental Ironsides.

Ironsides Drops Back.

The field was away in perfect alignment, but Ironsides dropped back into fourth place immediately after the start, and he lost ground rather than made up any, for at one time he was back next to last in the six horse field. In the run down the stretch he showed little or no speed as Footmark went on to win by a neck from Uluniu. Suneros was third, and always the master of Ironsides.

Mike Syufy and his cronies may try to win another big bet on Ironsides some of these days. Maybe they will have such a hot tempered kid as G. Depeso in the saddle, who won't ride him if he doesn't get a lot the best of it from the starter. But, whatever happens to Ironsides, I don't want any ticket on him. He runs as if he might be a spent arrow. When the older sons of Man o' War drop back among the ordinary horses they become just about as stylish as grandpa's old buggy horse. But grandpa's old buggy horse was a pretty faithful animal, at that.

Cubs Beat Phillies, 6 to 3; Break Tie in 8th Inning

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The return to active service of Rogers Hornsby's bat yesterday seemed to restore some of the Cubs' lost art of hitting for distance. It came back in the form of homers by Rollie Hemsley and Clarence Blair, not to mention a couple of two baggers, thus furnishing Charley Root with enough runs to register his twelfth victory of the season at the expense of the Phillies, 6 to 3. It also marked his sixth successive triumph since the morning of July 4.

For a part of the battle the Cubs apeared to have a tough problem on their hands in the person of Phil Collins, the fidgety right hander. For four innings only one hit could be coaxed from his offerings, but after that he found the Cubs a bit more ferocious. They slipped him some bad news in the fifth when, in the wake of a single, Hemsley sailed a drive over the wall and then they broke him as well as a 3 to 3 tie in the eighth. It was in this episode that Hornsby's double drove in the deciding run and Blair's homer added two more tallies.

Mows Down 9 Phils.

The skill of Mr. Root was particularly noticeable when it came to getting a third strike on his enemies. He set down Koster and Bartell in that way in the first inning. He did it to Collins and again to Koster in the second, in which he also had trouble amounting to two Philly runs. In the third he added the powerful Chuck Klein to the select company. Then he didn't fan another hostile until the seventh, when Whitney and Collins were tricked into third swings. And in the ninth he stretched the strikeout total to nine by inducing Hurst and McCurdy to join the club.

Mr. Root began his current series of dazzling exhibitions when he flattened the Reds, 1 to 0, the morning of July 4. He took a couple of days' rest and returned to whip the Cardinals, 14 to 3. When the eastern invasion started a couple of weeks back he triumphed over the Giants, 5 to 2. Then he took on the Robins and nosed them out, 1 to 0. When the Braves came along he made them fold up, 3 to 1, the latter tally scoring in the ninth and ending his string of 22 runless innings.

Smith Hurls Today.

Root started off stylishly by fanning the first two men to face him, but for a few minutes in the second inning he looked like a different fellow. After Arlett had been retired on a fly to left, Hurst walked and stole second. McCurdy also walked. Whitney slashed a single to left, and Hurst ran home. Mallon singled in the same direction to score McCurdy. Root than straightened out things in a hurry by striking out both Collins and Koster. His next strikeout was on Klein in the third, making the fifth up to this point.

The Cubs redeemed one of the Phils' two runs in the home third because Blair stepped in at the right time with a hit. The half opened with Barton being hit in the ribs. A pass to Hornsby was next. Wilson, who was restored to regular employment because of the injury to Stephenson, hit a long fly to right, but not far enough to prevent Arlet from get-

JOHN HEYDLER CRACKS WHIP A LA BAN JOHNSON

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—Well, now, it is very refreshing to note how firmly old John Heydler, the president of the National league, stood up for his umpires in the recent row with John McGraw, and whether the umpires were any good or positively no good, I hope and trust that there will be more of that jawing back and forth. It stimulates things, this name calling and beefing, and, aside from the row itself, there was a hilarious touch when McGraw went tearing around to Mr. Heydler to blab that this umpire had threatened to kill him.

I wonder what can have happened to Mr. McGraw that he runs and tattles to the teacher nowadays when an umpire threatens to knock his ears down for swearing at him, instead of waylaying the umpire at the umpire's gate about sundown, seconded by some successor to Cozy Dolan to assure fair play, and wiping his spikes on the umpire's countenance. Anyway, knowing a little something about Mr. McGraw's vocabulary, Mr. Heydler didn't do anything to the umpire but set McGraw down for three days, a penalty that seems to have had something to do with the loss of a couple of ball games by the Giants.

Roaring Executives Are Best.

Somebody has been feeding Mr. Heydler meat and maybe there is hope that this most conciliatory and nominal of the prominent executives in American sport will let fly now and again as Ban Johnson used to do. I am all for roaring executives in baseball for the same reason that when the customers go to the circus they like to hear the live stock yell and growl. Realizing this, the circus people carry special hands whose jobs it is to stir up the animals.

Similarly, in politics the campaign that brings out the biggest vote is the campaign in which the nominees descend to personalities. When a candidate says he hopes the campaign will be conducted on a high, imperial plane I always suspect that he is afraid to start anything and when both of them confine themselves to the issues, the campaign is likely to be a flop, with both men indicted by their reticence. The one campaign remark that I remember best had nothing to do with the tariff, prohibition or prosperity but with the character of a candidate who was described as having the hide of a rhinoceros and the brain of a baboon.

So, now that Mr. McGraw is be-

CHARLEY RETZLAFF.

New York, July 28.—(AP)—Charley Retzlaff, the lanky, righthand walloper from the wheat fields of Minnesota, scored his 30th knockout in 24 engagements tonight. He flattened Mateo Oss, a stiff punching youngster from Spain, with one booming right hand uppercut to the chin in the third round.

Steve Hamas continued his knockout parade by slapping Frank Morris, heavyweight champion of the New York National Guard, all over the ring for seven rounds. He floored Morris five times before the referee called a halt and a technical knockout in the seventh round of the semi-final.

Hitting Brooklyn pitching safely three times in four times at bat, Harvey Hendrick of Cincinnati not only climbed back into the Big Six yesterday but he gained a tie with Charley Grimm for the league lead. Grimm is ahead by only a small fraction of a percentage point.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—Think of it, old subscribers! The Chicago White Sox, those undermanned wanderers, made 11 runs on 12 hits in the eighth inning this afternoon to nose out the powerful and affluent New York Yankees, 14 to 12.

If we were addicted to sports superlatives we'd call it the "Upset of the Century." And if we'd had a drink on the trip we'd swear we'd been seeing double.

But let's get right down to the reporting business and tell you about the most startling inning we ever have witnessed, not barring that sunkissed session in the Cubs-Macks world series.

Here's How, Mates—And How!

The Sox, going into the eighth, were trailing 12 to 3, mostly because Tommy Thomas had indulged himself in a six run foldup with two out in the sixth.

Sullivan opened the big surprise with a fly to Ruth. Reynolds then came through with his first hit of the game and his first of two doubles in the inning. Fonseca slammed a single past Lary, scoring Reynolds. Lazzeri recovered the ball, but Lary dropped his throw trying to get Fonseca going into second. Fothergill, whose contribution to the triumph was two doubles, a home run and a triple, got the homer at this juncture, driving in Fonseca ahead of him. This made the score Yanks 12, Sox 6.

"Gran'pap Won," Wehde'll Say.

Blue tripled to right, scoring Grube and Caraway, who ran for Jolley. Gomez replaced Ruffing. Jeffries batted for Sullivan and sent a fly to Ruth which drove home Blue. Reynolds got his second double of the inning and forthwith scored on Fonseca's second single of the inning.

It scarcely could be figured that Fothergill, with two doubles and a homer already in his bag, was due

New York, July 28.—[Special.]—Eagle birds, those horses which have such high prices laid against them that they have found a firm place in the argot of the turf goer, were flying in flocks at Empire City today when the favorites did poorly.

The feature went to Mrs. W. A. Rosen's Airliner, a 15 to 1 shot, with another 15 to 1 shot second and a 25 to 1 chance third. Misnomer was second, five lengths back of Airliner and two lengths in front of At Random.

Favorite Is Last.

Since matters were rather topsy-turvy as far as form was concerned, it doubtless was appropriate that Candy Hog, the 3 to 5 favorite, brought up last of the eleven that ran. Airliner was piloted by the apprentice, Willie Studley, and led from the start. He was clocked in 1:48 3-5.

Airliner is a former Harry Payne Whitney horse, but has been running without success in humble company of late. Far back in many races, there were few who gave the gelded son of Mad Hatter a chance. Yet he was off like a flash and held on with a tenacity worthy of a stake horse.

Emancipate Wins.

One winning favorite was Mrs. Herbert Pulitzer's Emancipate, driven down to 11 to 5 from 4 to 1. Odds-on choices were no exception to the form upsets what with Defier, 4 to 5, in the curtain raiser, getting third; and Morshion, 7 to 10, in the fifth race, landing in the same place.

ting it. Blair drove a double past Hurst to score Barton and put Hornsby on third. But Hemsley fanned and Root popped to Bartell.

Hemsley Hits Homer.

Blair strolled up at the start of the fifth and looped a single to right center for his second hit and also the Cubs' second hit off Collins. Hemsley hung around until the count got down to 2 and 2 and then sailed one high enough in the air to get the benefit of the wind. The ball descended beyond the left field wall, putting the Cube in front by 3 to 2. Collins then walked Root, but after Jurges' sacrifice, both English and Cuyler lined out.

After his flurry in the second, Root turned out three innings which were perfect except for a single by McCurdy in the third. McCurdy was erased in an attempted steal. In the sixth, however, a pair of hits robbed Root of his slender lead. Two were out when Arlett drilled a two bagger to the right field fence. Then Hurst lined to right center and Barton tried to scoop up the ball on the first bounce, but it eluded him and went off its way for a triple, Arlett scoring. The inning closed with McCurdy's grounder to Blair.

Dissolve 3-3 Tie.

The 3 to 3 deadlock started to fall apart in the eighth, when with one out Barton had himself punctured for the second time and the fourth in two days. Hornsby then proved the value of his bat. He caromed a line drive off the corner of the bleacher in left center. Barton scored on the hit, and when Collins messed up the return throw Hornsby, who had stopped at second, went on to third. Hack popped up over the plate, but Blair, after taking one ball, crashed the next into the right field bleachers. Then Hemsley singled for his third hit, but Root couldn't prolong the spurt.

Fairmount Is Favorite in Steeplechase

Even with a weight package of 170 pounds, which he must carry over a gruelling two mile and a half course, old Fairmount from Joseph E Widener's stable was made the overnight favorite to win the $5,000 added Lake Forest Steeplechase at Arlington this afternoon.

Indigo will be running mate of Fairmount and may win the race, but it was Fairmount's presence in the overnight entries which caused the Widener entry to become the 4 to 5 favorite. The Fox Chapel stud entry of Acrobate II. and Sardeneza was the second choice at 2 to 1. There are two Chicago horses in the chase, James Simpson Jr.'s Queen's Pal and Ben L. Behr's Tod Sloan. Both were at tall odds in the overnight betting. The Steeplechase stake is to be run as the third event of today's program.

With Tick On, a son of On Watch and Sox, belonging to Mrs. L. G. Kaufman, formerly of Chicago, which is to try his luck in the Post and Paddock revival next Saturday, Max Hirsch will bring on Quarter Deck for the Arlington Handicap. Both of these are homebreds. Mrs. Kaufman is breeding on a small scale in Kentucky. Morton Schwartz, a New York broker, is in production more ambitiously. Quarter Deck is a 4 year old son of Man O' War and Trace. His Arlington Handicap burden is 104 pounds.

While Spinach is trying to win the Arlington Handicap Saturday, his stable companion, Sunny Lassie, will be down in Kentucky seeing what she can do about the Latonia Stakes. Sunny Lassie beat a flock of fine 3 year old colts in last September's renewal at Belmont Park of Nursery Handicap. Her best performance this year was her mile in 1:35 4-5 in front of Knight Commander, Sunvir, Dark Sea, My Dandy, and Silverdale last Saturday.

Beavers' Habits Are Learned by Studying Captives

BY BOB BECKER.

Three tame herring gulls—Pete, Repeat, and Threepete—four domesticated baby beavers, two adult beavers, and one pet crow named Jim. This was the wild life menagerie we visited a few days ago when we coasted down to the shores of beautiful Lake Leelanau, northwest of Traverse City, Mich., where Walter Hastings, wild life photographer for the state of Michigan, conducts a number of experiments with feathered and furred denizens of the forests.

Hastings' demonstration of what can be done with beavers was a revelation. These shy, busy creatures are not ordinarily ranked as good household pets. As a matter of fact, Michigan institutions have tried many times to raise baby beavers without success.

And it is hard to believe that within 24 hours after being taken adult wild beavers can be so handled that they will permit you to stroke their heads and scratch their ears. Hastings was able to do that with the big fellows which were trapped in their home stream. Incidentally, he never would have been able to keep them in a pen if each of the animals had not lost a front foot. Encounters with steel traps were responsible for this condition.

With four young flattails and two adults tame and available for study, we had a chance to make some interesting observations on the habits of these animals. One was this: Beavers are not lively companions during the day. Both young and old spent most of the daylight hours sleeping. But around sundown they began to take a new interest in life.

The big holes the adult animals dug in the pen were made after dark. Their feeding also starts around sundown.

Hastings raised the baby beavers on oatmeal and milk, but now they are getting plump and fat on poplar trees. The little fellows sit up on their hind legs and tail and handle the leaves with their front paws much like a squirrel handles a nut.

MARCHIONESS CAPTURES GRAND CIRCUIT FEATURE

Auburn Entry Wins Last Two Heats of Trot.

TORONTO, Ont., July 28.—(AP)—An Auburn, N. Y., owned mare, The Marchioness, captured the 2 year old trot, feature of the Grand Circuit meeting today.

FLORENCE McCOY BEATS MEDALIST IN WOMEN'S GOLF

Virginia Ingram Loses, 3-2, in Match Play.

BY BETTY ECKERSALL.

Florence McCoy of Olympia Fields, a newcomer in golf competition, created a surprise in the first day of match play of the women's Chicago district championship tournament yesterday by defeating Virginia Ingram of Sunset Ridge, the medalist, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Jones Easy Winner.

Mrs. Melvin Jones of Lincolnshire did not meet with any difficulty in winning from Mrs. O. C. Bell of Edgewood Valley. The score was 3 and 6. Another feature was the 5 and 3 victory of June Beebe of Olympia Fields, women's western title holder, over Mrs. J. W. Taylor of Evanston. Miss Beebe's golf is justifying all the practice she spent on the game. Her card was 83.

Mrs. H. Austin Pardue of Indian Hill, formerly one of the best golfers in the Western association, suffered a 3 and 2 defeat at the hands of Mrs. E. B. Anderson of Tam o' Shanter. Mrs. Pardue, who shot a 39 on the first nine holes of qualifying play, was all over the course yesterday.

Mrs. Zech Beaten.

Coach Stagg and Son Win in Net Meet

Alonzo Stagg, athletic director at the University of Chicago, and his son, Paul, won their opening match in the midwest father and son's tennis tournament on the University of Chicago courts yesterday.

The Stagg combination completely overwhelmed its opponents, Constant and Marias Alex of Chicago, without losing a single game, 6-0, 6-0. Coach Stagg moved spryly about the court playing consistent, cautious tennis, while Paul mixed the play with fast, slashing drives.

Hands Lose to Doerrs.

The only upset occurred when Robert and John Doerr defeated Coleman and Carville Hands, seeded in the second position, 2-6, 6-1, 9-7. The younger members of the two teams carried the fight, but the contest was decided when the Hands weakened under an onslaught of cross-court placements.

In the veterans' tournament, held in conjunction with the father and son championships, play progressed to the semi-finals, with four seeded players remaining unscathed. Walter Hayes, defending champion, defeated Joseph McKirnan of Oak Park, 6-0, 6-3.

Pieper Beats Knox.

C. R. Pieper of La Crosse, Wis., holder of several Wisconsin titles, beat Harry S. Knox, first vice president of the U. S. L. T. A., in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2. Dr. S. W. Thwaites of Grand Rapids, Mich., eliminated F. F. Bradley, former president of the Chicago Tennis association.

SECOND X-RAY SHOWS STEVIE'S ANKLE BROKEN

Riggs Stephenson, the Cubs' veteran left fielder, probably will be out of action for the remainder of the current season. A second X-ray examination yesterday morning revealed that instead of a sprain he had suffered a fracture of a small bone in his right ankle when he stepped on first base in the opening inning of Monday's game. Immediately after the mishap he was rushed to Masonic hospital, but the first examination failed to show anything more serious than a sprain.

Stephenson was unable to offer a clear explanation as to what caused the accident. As he stepped on the bag his body came in contact with Pitcher Blake who had taken a throw from Hurst. He thought that the slight collision unbalanced him just enough to cause him to step on the edge of the bag. The sudden twist of the ankle snapped the bone.

Two Shoot 153.

Back of these leaders came Douglas Casey of Riverside and William Redmond Jr. of Joliet, captain elect of Notre Dame's golf team. Each had 153. A trio of 154's came next which included Charles Evans Jr. of Edgewater, national amateur champion in 1916 and 1920; Art Sweet, Ridgemoor's golfing scribe, and James Garard of Midlothian, who once captained the Maroon golfers.

Gus Fetz, city and state public parks champion, amended a morning 79 with a 76 in the afternoon to score the only 155 of the day. The qualifying score for this section, in order to determine the 24 who go on to Beverly, proved to be 162.

150 WIN PLACES

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

One hundred and fifty places in the national amateur golf championship, to be held at the Beverly Country club, Chicago, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, were filled in a nation-wide qualifying round of 36 holes in 20 widely scattered districts yesterday.

Only in a few isolated instances did favorites fail to pass the initial test held this year for the first time in the history of the event. The 150 qualifiers, together with two Englishmen who were exempt from qualifying, John and Alaric de Forrest, will go through another 36 hole qualifying round at Chicago on the first two days of the championship, the low 32 continuing to the match play rounds.

McKinney Leads with 140.

The honor of turning in the lowest score for yesterday's 36 holes went to Bud McKinney of Del Rio, Tex., who led the Dallas district with a score of 140.

Ex-Champions Qualify.

At Boston, Jesse Guilford and Francis Ouimet, both ex-champions, qualified, as did young Tommy Tailer. Watts Gunn was safely in the fold at Pittsburgh, as were two Ohio state aces, Bob Kepler and Johnny Florio, at Cincinnati.

Harrison R. [Jimmy] Johnston, who won the 1929 title, led the Minneapolis field with 143. Los Angeles' four qualifiers all were first flight stars, Charley Seaver of Stanford, sensation of the last championship; Maurice McCarthy of New York, former intercollegiate champion; Fay Coleman of Culvery City, and Roland MacKenzie, former Walker cup player.

William Lawson Little qualified at Denver, and C. Ross Somerville of London, Ont., former Canadian amateur king, made the grade at Detroit. Two veterans, J. Wood Platt and Max R. Marston, were among the Philadelphia qualifiers, and Chasteen Harriss, southern amateur champion, led at St. Louis, where Emmett Spicer of Memphis and Jimmy Manion of St. Louis also qualified.

The Chief Failures.

The chief failures were Charles Yates, Georgia state champion, whose 154 was not good enough to get him in the elect at Atlanta, Ga., and Billy McPhail of Norfolk, Va., whose 164 put him far out of the running at Boston.

Frank Dolp of Portland, Ore., Pacific northwest champion, set the pace at Seattle with the veteran Portland dentist, Dr. Oscar F. Willing, in second place.

MOTOR CRIBBAGE.

DEAR HARVE: To relieve tedium, if any, on motor trips, try playing motor cribbage on the license plates of on-coming cars. Each player takes license numbers on the ten alternate cars met. Thus, twenty cars make total game.

Zeros count as ten. Score the count as follows: Number 601-785. Fifteen six and a run of four makes ten. Number 51-386. Fifteen four. Frequently six number combinations lead to some fantastic totals. On the other hand, there is no crib to supplement the count.

Write the numbers down as the cars pass—and figure them afterward. This game was conceived by young daughter, a devotee of cribbage. It may be old stuff but we never heard of it before.

Another Scheme to Beat Races.

Two ladies of our party at Arlington last Saturday were still strangers to the pay-off mutuel window when the last race arrived. Chagrined by their failure to pick the winners, one said, "Let's try the Eeenie, meenie, meinie, moe system." This they did with a word for each horse's name on the program, and the added sentence, "O-u-t, out goes he," except that "he" in this instance meant their choice.

Ladrone was their selection by this method, and Ladrone won and broke a track record, presumably under the stimulus of such picking. Looking over the card afterward, these ladies found that playing across the board they would have cashed something in five of the eight races. There is no trademark on the idea.

Antidotes.

Anent our remarks on the eagles [others called them mosquitoes], which bit us when we tried to play night golf, we are informed that chemists of three large companies are experimenting to find a solution to drive away the pests. They see commercial possibilities, if successful, for residential areas and country clubs. Objection to most sprays now available is that they injure the grass or foliage.

coming his old petulant self again and now that science has given the amplifiers to the world, I wonder if it wouldn't be possible to hang a microphone over Mr. McGraw's place in the Giants' dugouts around the league and let the customers in on that mysterious fire of vituperation which so often has led to sudden ructions on the ball field. Though I have covered many ball games, I have never been able to catch the text of any of these remarks and when the players, who are rotten reporters and generally afraid to talk very much, report vaguely that Mac just called the umpire one thing and another, my curiosity is only aggravated.

The ball parks are so big nowadays and the acquisitions of the dugouts are such that the customers rarely are aware that a manager or athlete has begun to pass remarks until an umpire runs over, much exasperated and blushing at the neck, to thumb him out of there.

Television Should be Installed.

And possibly television should be installed, also to keep the customers familiar with the more intimate details of the drama, because some of the athletes are able to convey a very fluent line of insults with gestures of the hands as happened at the last world series in St. Louis.

I must waive my fine sense of ethics in sport for a moment to argue that bickering and the calling of more or less insulting names is a good thing because the customers, in their hearts, enjoy it, and the customer is the final judge as to what sport isn't. If he stays away, it isn't sport, and he is more likely to absent himself from a quiet, orderly routine of putouts, assists and errors than from a ball game which he has reason to expect to break into disorder at any time.

The most memorable ball game the Giants ever played, so I have read in the memoirs of those sport writers whom we call venerable, was the one in which the Giants and the Cubs played off a tie, both sides inflamed by hate and threatening to go to it with 36 ounce bats for the love of their respective groups of stockholders.

Jawn Became Apathetic Now.

Mr. McGraw always has borne a certain reputation and I think one reason why the customers have been apathetic in the last few years has been that Mr. McGraw, by comparison with his past demeanor, seemed apathetic, too. As a quarrelsome, name calling, umpire baiter he established his character with the customers, and they paid him many a year's wages for being himself, but a sweet and philosophical McGraw is as far out of character as an angry and abusive Connie Mack would be.

As for Mr. Heydler, when he rears back and gives McGraw as good a bawling out as he sends and puts him out of the ball yard for three days with his club in the thick of a tough fight for the pennant, he isn't stepping out of character because always up to this time he had had no positive public character of any kind. Once a year he rejoined the quibbling on the gross aggregate mileage of all the clubs and the gross consumption of baseballs. He has stepped into character for the first time in all these years, and judging by the accounts of what he said and did, old John gave a pretty good show in his debut.

Only fancy John McGraw running to old John Heydler to squeal on an umpire who threatened to do him great bodily harm.

Those Poor Old Sox! Let's See What They Did

"—Root popped to Bartell to end the second inning, ladies and gentlemen. One run, one hit and no errors," said the announcer. "And while we are waiting for Buzz Arlett to come to bat let's see what's going on in the American league.

"The Macks are still leading the St. Louis Browns, 1 to 0, at the end of the fifth inning. Over at New York—O, things have been happening to our Sox—let's see now. Well, the poor, poor White Sox. The Yankees scored three runs in the fifth and six—SIX RUNS, ladies and gentlemen—in the sixth inning and are now leading the Sox, 11 to 3. Ho, Ho!

"But we shouldn't laugh at the White Sox, ladies and gentlemen. It's too bad. That is one of the most pitiful cases in baseball. It almost makes one cry. Those poor fellows are trying so hard, but they can't hit and with all their pitchers too tired, or with sore arms, and the home office refusing to give Manager Bush any support, it's just too bad, ladies and gentlemen."

The reporter lolls on, sympathizing with the poor White Sox. The radio again reports:

"And while we are waiting for the Phils to come to bat in the first half of the seventh, let's see what's going on over in the American league, ladies and gentlemen. The Yankees are now leading the White Sox 12 to . . . wait a minute—that can't be right. Say, Joe, what is that in the eighth inning? What? There must be something wrong. Joe ask Harry Lawrence out there what that eighth inning Sox should be. Just a minute, ladies and gentlemen—what? Well, what do you know about that!" says the philosophical announcer. "What do you know about that? The White Sox got 11 runs on 12 hits in the eighth and are now leading, 14 to 12."

Cards Blank Braves, 1-0, in Hurling Duel

St. Louis, Mo., July 28.—(AP)—Sparky Adams beat out a bunt in the eighth, went to second on a wild throw, to third on an infield out and raced home after a long fly by Jake Flowers to give the St. Louis Nationals a 1 to 0 victory over the Boston Braves here this afternoon.

From the first inning on, two veterans, Jess Haines for the champions and old Tom Zachary for the Braves, engaged in a pitching duel. Although the victim, Zachary held the Cards to six hits while Haines was nicked eight times. Nearly 15,000 persons attended the game which featured a tuberculosis day charity here. Score:

GIANTS WHIP PIRATES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 28.—(AP)—Rallying in the late innings behind Carl Hubbell's expert pitching, the New York Giants evened the series with the Pirates with a 6 to 2 victory today. The Pirates scored twice in the fourth but Hubbell shut them out for the rest of the game.

The Giants did not get started until the heat forced Ervin Brame out of the game in the seventh. Then Leach tripled with two on base to drive in the winning runs as Spencer went in. Hubbell helped win his own game by hitting a double and two singles while Bill Terry collected a triple, a double and two walks in five trips to the plate. The defeat ended Pittsburgh's five game winning streak. Score:

SLAIN 'DON JUAN' IS TAKEN TO OLD HOME FOR BURIAL

Widow Seeks in Vain for Harbaugh Relatives.

The body of Dell F. Harbaugh, the salesman and inventor who was slain on Sunday in a struggle with his wife for possession of a weapon with which she had declared her intention of committing suicide, was in Earlville, Ill., last night. The body was taken to Earlville, former home of the couple, by William H. Lamb, Harbaugh's father-in-law, while Mrs. Harbaugh remained in Chicago.

The widow, who was released on Monday after a coroner's jury exonerated her, said last night that she would go to Earlville today, and that it was possible the funeral services will be held there tomorrow.

Seeks Husband's Relatives.

Her delay was occasioned by a hunt for some relatives of her husband, who it was believed might wish to give directions about his burial. Nothing has been discovered of any living relatives, however, and the widow said she did not believe it likely that any word would be received.

In that event, Mrs. Harbaugh said, her family will bear the expense of the services for the man who, according to testimony at the inquest, had carried on numerous affairs with other women during their married life, and who had deserted her twice.

Mrs. Scott Is Released.

During the day another woman widowed by a pistol was released from a charge of manslaughter at Oak Park. The case against Mrs. Hazel Scott was nolle prossed by the state's attorney's office before Justice of the Peace Frank Aring. She had been held in bonds of $1,000 since last week, although a coroner's jury, after three hours of testimony, had exonerated her.

Mrs. Scott's husband, Harold, was found lying on the floor of their home in Oak Park early on the morning of July 16, with a bullet in his head. Mrs. Scott asserted he committed suicide, after she had tried to frighten him by going into the bathroom and firing a revolver to make him think she was killing herself.

Continue Inquest Into Death of C. E. Butler

The inquest into the death of Charles E. Butler, a director of Butler Brothers, mail order house, who was killed by a Chicago and Northwestern train in Winnetka on Monday, was continued yesterday to Aug. 19 in order to give police time to find additional witnesses. Engineer W. E. Kennedy and Fireman Richard Ascherin of the train which ran Butler down testified that they saw him wave after he had started to cross the tracks at Gage street. Dr. Albert H. Wales, 896 Linden avenue, Winnetka, a brother-in-law, said that Mr. Butler had suffered a nervous breakdown.

Swallows 25 Cents Doing Parachute Jump on Wager

Cleveland, July 28.—(AP)—Mounted Patrolman Sam Meir hiccoughed daintily today over a swallowed 25 cent piece and basked in the glory of a 3,000 foot parachute jump.

Going aloft on a $50 wager by a brother policeman, Meir took precautions to insure opening of his parachute. One end of a handkerchief he tied to the ripcord ring. The other end he wrapped about a silver quarter and placed in his mouth. Jumping, he bit through the handkerchief—swallowed the quarter.

SCORE ARRESTED IN RAIDS FOR QUIZ IN UNION KILLING

Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office last night launched a series of raids throughout the west side, arresting more than a score of hoodlums in connection with the investigation into the murder Sunday morning of Ely H. Orr, secretary-treasurer of the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' union.

A number of members of the "42 gang," composed of young desperadoes, were taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning. They included Sammy Kaplan, well known police character, and Young Joe Montana, son of one of the Montana brothers, formerly leading alcohol cookers in Chicago.

Twenty-two prisoners were seized in the early raids. Four were seized at a soft drink parlor at 1547 Taylor street. They were Tom Russo, John Russo, Phil Weiner, and Michael Pape.

Chief of Detectives John Morton was forced to release Jack Barry, "czar" of the union until ousted at a recent election; Daniel Fiore, business agent of the union; his son, William, a driver, and Herbert Phelps, another business agent, when writs of habeas corpus were obtained for them.

Mrs. Sylvia Daro, 54, of 705 Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park, was instantly killed, and four other persons were injured yesterday when the automobile in which the party was riding plunged into a ditch and overturned near Kiel, Wis.

Dr. August F. Daro, Mrs. Daro's son, suffered a broken left arm, and his sister, Mickeline; Miss Minnie Allegratti of Chicago, and Miss Teresa Sisco of Oak Park were bruised. The accident occurred when Daro, who was at the wheel, attempted to pass another car.

Auto Hits Truck; 1 Dead, 3 Hurt.

Joseph Walta was killed, Henry Jeager was probably fatally injured, and Andrew Mastej and Peter Miller were seriously hurt early this morning when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a truck in Torrence avenue, a half mile north of the Ridge road. The homes of all the men are in East Chicago, Ind.

The truck was driven by Richard Bekker, a farmer of Lansing, who was on his way to a Chicago market with produce. Jeager was the driver of the automobile. The Lansing police took the three injured men to St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond.

Walta's death and one other increased the Cook county automobile toll to 645 since Jan. 1. The other victim:

Alphonse Arnold, 30, an Evanston policeman, died at the Martha Washington hospital from injuries sustained July 3, when the sedan he was driving skidded into a street car at Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue. Arnold's fiancée, Julia McKenne, 26, 826 Washington street, Evanston, was killed outright. His brother, Maurice, was merely bruised.

ALLEGED CAPONE AID ACCUSED BY GIRL SURRENDERS

Rocco De Grazio of Oak Park, known to police of the west suburbs as a "Capone lieutenant," surrendered to Justice of the Peace James Giles of Melrose Park last night to answer charges of a serious nature filed by Miss Antoinette Gugliuzzo, 22 years old, 155 21st avenue, Melrose Park.

In charging De Grazio with being the father of her child Miss Gugliuzzo said that two years ago De Grazio had forced his attentions upon her with a gun. Afterwards he threatened to have her "taken for a ride" if she tried to make any trouble for him. Miss Gugliuzzo said the only reason that she made a complaint against him at this time was because she read that Capone was going to be sentenced to jail and she thought it would be safe.

CONGRESSMAN MAJOR DIES; IT AGAIN GIVES G. O. P. MAJORITY OF 2

Fayette, Mo., July 28.—(AP)—Death today ended the career of Congressman Sam C. Major, 62, a Democratic leader of the state and veteran representative in congress from the Seventh Missouri district, and restored the Republican majority in the national house to two, which resulted from the last election.

Congressman Major, serving his fifth term in congress, died at 2:20 p. m. He suffered a paralytic stroke July 19.

Major was elected to his fifth term in the last election, after being defeated in the Republican landslide in 1928. He also lost out one term in the 1920 Republican landslide. He was elected to congress first in 1918. Prior to that he served in the Missouri senate.

The congressman was one of twelve Democrats in the present Missouri delegation of sixteen, but under federal reallocation based on the 1930 census, Missouri will have only thirteen congressmen next time. Unless the state is redistricted before the next election, they will be elected from the state at large.

Gov. Caulfield will have to call a special election in the Seventh district to elect Major's successor.

The congressman's funeral will be held here Thursday afternoon. His widow and two daughters, both married, survive.

The units at Camp Grant will be composed of five regiments of infantry; the 129th and 130th from downstate, and the 131st, 132d, and 8th, a Negro regiment, from Chicago; the 108th engineers, the 108th medical regiment, the 202d coast artillery, the 108th observation squadron, and the 33d division special troops, all from Chicago.

The guardsmen will spend the entire two weeks in camp this year, there being no overnight maneuvers planned. Routine field training, including firing on the rifle ranges, will comprise the bulk of the program. Gov. Emmerson's day, during which the governor makes his annual field inspection, has been set for Thursday, Aug. 13.

JOSEPH FALLON SR.

Policeman's Fallon's great treasure was the black hickory stick with which he helped to suppress the the riot of May 4, 1886, in which many policemen were killed. It was his ambition that each of his sons become a policeman and five of them fulfilled his wish.

The sons who became policemen are Joseph Jr. of the Lawndale station, Rupert of the Chicago avenue station, Thomas of the detective bureau, and Paul and Jack of the bureau of identification. The sixth son is Francis Fallon. Five daughters and a widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Fallon, also survive.

YOUTH KILLED AS BLACKMAIL SCHEME FAILS

Brazil, Ind., July 28.—(AP)—Leonard Courtney, 17, was shot and killed tonight as a sheriff's posse broke up what Clay county officers said was an attempt to carry out a $500 blackmail scheme against Tom Modesitt, former county commissioner, of Cory, near here.

Modesitt a few days ago received a letter demanding that he leave $500 on a culvert one mile south of Cory tonight. If he did not, the letter said, his home would be blown up within twenty-four hours.

Clay county officials advised him to place a decoy package there, and a posse was organized to keep watch. At the appointed time an automobile drew up to the culvert and Courtney and another youth climbed out.

The officers demanded that they halt and Courtney grabbed the package and started to run. He was shot through the head by a member of the posse. The other youth escaped through a cornfield and others, it was not known how many, drove away in the automobile.

FIVE VICTIMS OF U. S. DRY TRAP ASK JOBS BACK

Indianapolis, Ind., July 28.—[Special.]—The Indianapolis board of public safety tonight took under advisement possible reinstatement of five former members of the city police department whose convictions on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law were reversed yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago.

Although an attorney representing the men appeared before the board and urged that they receive their old jobs back, together with full pay for the ten months they have been off the force, members of the board indicated there was little likelihood of the latter.

The board members said they wished to determine positively whether the policemen drank liquor and received money at the federal government operated speakeasy here.

STOCKHOLDERS VOTE STANDARD-VACUUM DEAL

Will Have Assets of Close to Billion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—Merger of the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil company has been voted by stockholders depositing their shares in favor of the deal, it was announced today by Charles E. Arnott, president of Vacuum.

Within a week, he declared, the new company, to be known as the Socony-Vacuum corporation, will take its place among the industrial giants of the nation with total assets of almost a billion dollars. Stockholders are scheduled to act formally on the proposal Thursday.

The consolidation will bring together two of the most highly integrated organizations in the oil industry. Vacuum has specialized in lubricants and its branches extend into virtually every nation of the world and every corner of the United States. Socony's activities, as a marketer, are confined to the north Atlantic seaboard, but its producing properties are located in many sections of the country.

Clear Way to Merger.

The way toward consolidation of the companies was finally cleared on July 6, when the Barneson group of California announced it would withdraw its opposition to the merger. The Barnesons, who owned a substantial block of Standard of New York shares, had at first the merger terms were not favorable.

Final consummation of the merger was viewed in Wall street as a distinct victory for the oil companies. The consolidation, at first, was opposed by the government, which brought an anti-trust suit against the concerns, but after a statutory court of three judges approved the deal the attorney general announced no further legal action would be taken. By this decision oil men believe the Standard oil companies will be able eventually to bring together their units separated in 1911 by a decree of the United States Supreme court. Wall street trade hints that the next move will be a merger of the Standard Oil companies of California and New Jersey.

Market activity in the shares of the two companies was slack today, but both scored fractional advances on news of consummation of the merger. Socony sold at 18, up ¼, and Vacuum at 44½, up ¾.

Terms of Merger.

The terms of the merger call for creation of a new company whose total capitalization has not been announced. Socony stockholders will receive two and one-half shares of the new stock for each share of the old stock and Vacuum holders share for share. In commenting on the merger, Mr. Arnott declared:

"Only self-contained, integrated units of production, refining, and marketing, which also include a number of retail outlets, can survive. This is true nationally as well as internationally. Such a company is the new billion dollar Socony-Vacuum corporation.

"Not only will it contain every element of the production, refining and distribution of a complete line of petroleum products, but, as if arranged by nature, the field of action of the two companies is surprisingly complementary.

Supplement Each Other.

"Among the oldest and strongest manufacturers of petroleum products, the two companies supplement each other both from a geographic point of view of marketing, nationally as well as on a world-wide basis, and from the standpoint of the type of product manufactured by each.

"The union of the two companies is essentially a merger of two complementary units both from a geographic and manufacturing standpoint. It is logical because it is in keeping with the trends and developments of the times and the needs of the business."

ERIE OFFICES GO TO CLEVELAND FROM NEW YORK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

The Van Sweringen brothers, railroad consolidaters, who have already done much to make Cleveland one of the great railroad centers in this country, are responsible for the change. They have a majority ownership in the line.

The Erie's old offices on 23rd street and its executive offices on Church street will be given up, although it is thought the Church street office will continue to be used as a branch of the treasurer's office.

About 1,000 employés are affected by the change. Household effects were shifted into baggage cars attached to the same train carrying members of the company. The car records, transportation, auditor's and disbursement departments have already been moved. Executives of the company will leave Aug. 18.

Lesser Steel Firms Make Reports on Operations

Coincident with the issuance of the U. S. Steel corporation report yesterday several smaller steel companies made public the results of their operations during the June quarter and the first six months of the year.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube company and the Republic Steel corporation each reported net losses for the second quarter and the first six months. Inland Steel and Jones and Laughlin Steel corporation operations resulted in a profit in both periods, but the earnings were sharply below the corresponding periods of 1930.

Inland Steel corporation had June quarter net profit of $772,756, which is equivalent to 64 cents a share on the 1,200,000 shares of stock outstanding. In the preceding quarter the company reported profit of $633,573 or 52 cents a share while in the June quarter of 1930 net profits amounted to $2,620,300 or $2.19 a share. Second quarter profit brought six months earnings to $1,406,629 or $1.16 a share. This compares with net profit of $5,341,618 or $4.46 a share in the first half of last year.

Directors Vote Dividend.

Directors voted to maintain the present dividend rate of $2.50 a year by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share. In the first quarter of this year the rate was reduced from the $4 annual basis which was in existence in 1930.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube company sustained a loss of $1,176,444 after all charges, including depreciation, for the second quarter, as compared with $822,909 for the first quarter.

The company sold $25,000,000 additional bonds in April and interest on these bonds was included in the second quarter charges. Operating results of the second quarter, therefore, were considered about the same as those of the first and probably slightly better. Sheet and Tube earned its full interest charges with $519,188 to spare in the second quarter, while the same figure for the first quarter was $791,737.

Strengthens Position.

The semi-annual balance sheet issued at the same time by the board of directors shows greatly strengthened current and cash position as compared with the end of the year. Current assets, including about $20,000,000 cash and government bonds, exceed current liabilities almost 15 to 1. At the end of last year cash and investments were $5,300,000.

The balance sheets also shows that the reserve for dividends to dissenting stockholders has been increased from $1,250,000 to $1,728,100.

The company maintained its preferred dividend payments and a reduced common dividend. This resulted in a reduction of surplus from $51,912,590.94 to $47,201,604.85. Due to the sale of bonds funded debt increased from $70,500,000 outstanding at the end of last year to $95,500,000.

Republic Steel Report.

Republic Steel corporation issued a statement showing a loss for the quarter ending June 30, 1931, of $1,092,304, as compared with a net loss of $1,692,593 for the preceding quarter. The statement showed a net gain from operations of $1,803,183 after deducting charges for maintenance and repairs of plants amounting to $2,071,230.98.

Interest on indebtedness was $904,345, making a profit for the quarter of $899,637. This, less $1,916,942 for provision for depreciation and renewal of plants and for exhaustion of minerals, made a net loss from operations of $1,017,304.

Preferred dividends paid on guaranteed stock of the Trumbull-Cliffs Furnace company totaled $75,000. Net loss for the six months amounted to $2,784,898, against a net profit of $1,643,241 in the same period last year after Trumbull-Cliffs preferred dividends were paid.

Has $391,823 Profit.

Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation reported net profit of $391,823, after depreciation, depletion, taxes and interest, for the quarter ended June 30, as compared with net loss of $190,982 in the preceding quarter and net profit of $3,403,857 in the second quarter of 1930.

Net profit for the first six months of 1931 was $200,841, compared with net profit of $6,958,696 in the corresponding period of 1930. A deficit of $523,830 was shown for the second quarter and $2,718,625 for the six months period of 1931, after payment of common and preferred dividends.

Great Britain imported 26,245 tons of unmanufactured lead during June, in contrast to 20,858 tons in May, and 26,400 in April.

Ohio Acts to Keep Trucks Off Congested Highways

Columbus, O., July 28.—(AP)—A new policy in routing commercial freight traffic through Ohio to avoid overly congested highways was instituted by the Ohio utilities commission today in the denial of two applications for trucking permits, but commissioners intimated it probably will be further applied to bus operation.

One of the applications denied was brought by the Truck Owners Freight company for operation of a line from Akron, O., to Omaha, Neb. Both applications were for routes over U. S. highway 20, one of the main traffic arteries between the east coast and Chicago.

Studebaker, Illinois Central Vote Regular Dividends

While the attention of the business world was centered on the U. S. Steel meeting yesterday where a dividend cut to $4 annually was announced, the directors of several other important corporations met for dividend action. The present dividend rates were maintained by the Studebaker corporation, Illinois Central railroad and the Johns-Manville corporation.

The Illinois Central also issued its income report for June and the first half year. The figures reflected the drastic reduction in the volume of traffic handled by the road this year. Net railway operating income for June was $721,806, which was a decline of $990,218 from the comparable month last year. Gross revenues last month totaled $9,976,081, a drop of $2,161,414 from June, 1930.

Decline for Six Months.

For the six months' period net operating income was $3,392,769, a decrease of $6,632,668, and gross operating revenue totaled $60,832,935, down $17,600,217 from the same period last year. The present dividend rate on the common stock was maintained through the declaration of a regular quarterly disbursement of $1 a share.

Studebaker corporation directors voted the regular quarterly distribution of 50 cents a share on common and Johns-Manville directors authorized the usual payment of 75 cents a share for the quarter.

Hannibal Bridge company declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share. Sanford Mills omitted the semi-annual dividend of $1 a share due at this time.

On 60 Cent Basis.

Hamilton Watch company declared a quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share, placing the stock on a 60 cents annual basis. Previously monthly dividends of 15 cents a share, or $1.80 a year, had been paid, together with an extra at the end of the year, usually 15 cents.

Directors of Sherwin-Williams Co., paint manufacturers, declared an extra dividend of 12½ cents per share on common stock in addition to the regular $1 quarterly payment, continuing a policy of preceding quarters of the year. The regular quarterly dividend on 6 per cent preferred stock also was declared. President George A. Martin said earnings in June were about $160,000 above the same month last year.

Chain Pays Extra.

Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company directors declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of $1.50 a share on the common stock, payable Sept. 1 to stockholders of record Aug. 7.

United Engineering and Foundry corporation declared an extra of 35 cents a share in addition to the regular dividends on the common and preferred.

Vick Financial corporation directors declared a quarterly dividend of 7½ cents on the common stock, payable Aug. 15 to stockholders of record Aug. 5. This places the stock on a 30 cent annual basis, against 40 cents previously.

Reduces Dividend.

Directors of Federal Water Service corporation have declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share on the class "A" stock, payable Sept. 1 to stockholders of record Aug. 6. This places the stock on a $1.20 annual basis, against $2.40 previously. Dividends on the stock are cumulative to the extent of $2 annually.

C. T. Chenery, president, said earnings for the year ended May 31 distributable to class "A" stock were $2.62 a share, compared with $3.01 in the previous year. Earnings distributable to class "A" stock have remained at $2.62 a share for the yearly periods ended March, April, and May this year, and it is anticipated that the company has passed through its low earning point, he said.

WALL ST. TAKES STEEL DIVIDEND ACTION CALMLY

General Trade Wilts with the Heat.

A sharp break in the price of United States Steel common on the San Francisco stock exchange after the close on the New York exchange yesterday showed that speculators had not entirely discounted the reduction in the dividend rate to $4 a share annually. Sales in the San Francisco market at 3:15, Chicago time, were made at 88½ high, 88 low, and 87½ last. There were 400 shares sold at the latter figure. U. S. Steel closed unchanged at 92⅜ in New York.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 28.—It was hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalks of Wall street today and the stock market wilted down along with everything else in creation. Business was of a piece with that of yesterday, when volume fell to the lowest figure in nearly seven years.

Traders tried to make themselves believe that they were waiting on the outcome of the United States Steel corporation's dividend meeting late in the afternoon, but most of them had known for a week that the rate was going to be cut. It really didn't matter a great deal one way or the other to the most of them. Steel had long since given up enough of its recent advance to discount the "bad news"—in the opinion of the wise ones, at any rate—and here in the last few days it had rebounded sufficiently to be on the safe side either way. No one really anticipated anything extraordinary to happen to the stock market as a result of the meeting, whatever the decision.

Floor Looks Deserted.

No, the plain truth is that there wasn't enough energy in the trading community to start anything—but an electric fan. The floor of the exchange was about as nearly deserted as it has been within the memory of the oldest trader there and the ticker just crept along, with protracted periods of rest and recreation. It was unanimous. The market naturally looks to U. S. Steel for its guide, but it looked in vain. The stock wound up exactly where it left off last night.

Its inclination, however, was toward higher levels, due to straggling short covering by traders grown cautious by talk that the dividend might not be cut after all. It costs a short $12.50 a day to maintain a short position on 100 shares of this so-called blue ribbon favorite, which is rather expensive waiting in these hard times. Other pivotal shares were steady, but likewise extremely narrow.

Rail Shares Quiet.

Railroad shares were virtually at a standstill as a group. Chesapeake and Ohio was higher on the encourage-

PLAN $400,000 CATHOLIC CHURCH IN RIVER FOREST

Will Be Built at Lathrop and Lake Street.

BY AL CHASE.

Sketches have been prepared and work may start later in the year on a $400,000 edifice to replace the present St. Luke's Roman Catholic church, at the northwest corner of Lathrop avenue and Lake street, in River Forest. The church is said to be one of the largest Catholic congregations in the Chicago suburban area. The Rev. Thomas A. Canty is pastor.

Real estate mortgages recorded in the principal urban districts of the country in June declined 25 per cent in volume from the total of the same month a year ago, according to a monthly compilation issued by Nelson, Hunt & Co. This June figure also was 17 per cent below that of May of this year.

Officials Sell to City.

Two city officials, Ald. John Toman and Edward J. Denemark, commissioner of compensation, have sold to the city of Chicago fifty feet of frontage at 4122 Ogden avenue, which is 111 feet northeast of Kedvale avenue, for $15,000, according to the county records, or at the rate of $300 per front foot. The property is 125 feet deep and will be used as a ward yard.

Mrs. Anna H. Loeb has sold the 100x150 vacant on the south side of East 50th street, 197 feet east of Ellis avenue, to Rosalind H. Freund, wife of Erwin O. Freund. The property has been used for some years as a flower garden in connection with the Freund residence at 5009 Ellis avenue. The Freund property and the land just acquired make an L shaped parcel surrounding the residence at the southeast corner of 50th and Ellis.

Park District Buys Tract.

The Edison Park district has purchased from the estate of Mary Ann Harrison a 2½ acre tract about a block and a half south of Touhy avenue and the same distance east of Harlem avenue, for an indicated $15,500. Waldo G. Campbell is secretary of the park district. There are now four small parks in the area.

The vacant 83x125 at the northeast corner of 79th street and Seeley avenue has been purchased by Franklin N. Warden, a member of the law firm of Cromwell, Greist & Warden, for an indicated $30,000. The new owner intends to improve at a later date with a store and apartment building.

An advance of 3@5c per pound in the wholesale price of light weight pork loins since last week's close has stimulated buying of hogs by smaller packers and city butchers.

Outside buyers encountered considerable competition yesterday and most hogs advanced in price. Lightest weights held about in line with the best time Monday, while heavy butchers and packing grades recorded gains of 10@25c. The general average price advanced 15c at $6.40, while the extreme top remained at $8.25. More than 80 per cent of the day's arrivals went to eastern buyers, and only 3,000 hogs were estimated left at the close.

Today's Hogs Bid $8.25.

Lightweight hogs for today's delivery were bid $8.25 on the "to arrive" market yesterday, but there were no offers to sell at that figure. Light weights for delivery next month were offered at $8.50 and bid $8.25, while September light were offered at $8.00 and December light at $7.50. Mediums for August were bid $7.75. September mediums were offered at $7.75 and bid $7.50, and December mediums were offered at $8.20.

Top yearling steers moved ahead another notch under brisk competition between local and outside buyers on yesterday's session. One lot of 11 steers and heifers mixed averaging 636 lbs. reached the new top of $9.15, which goes back to middle of last May for a higher figure. Medium and weighty beeves of outstanding quality shared in the strength, but extreme weights of plain quality and stock that had been on grass with very little grain in their ration, ruled weak to lower again.

Poorest grades of beef steers ranged downwards to $6.00. Eight carloads of Montana range steers forced to market by drought and dried up range sold for slaughter at $5.75@6.75. They averaged 1,000@1,200 lbs. Nebraska had corn fed cattle here that averaged 1,636@1,661 lbs. and sold at $8.00. Cows and heifers were slow and weak. Calves advanced 50c on a short supply. Stockers and feeders were scarce and firm, although demand is limited.

Top Lambs Reach $8.65.

Buyers in search of choice grades of lambs are finding it difficult to satisfy the demand due to the deterioration in quality of offerings during the last two weeks. Sorting is lightest of the season and packers are buying for "numbers" in an effort to stave off a rise in prices on the abbreviated receipts.

Supplies have been diminishing for several days and the first two days of this week show a decrease of about 25 per cent compared with Monday and Tuesday of last week. City butchers were forced up to $8.65 for best Washington range lambs and bought 500 natives at $8.50, while packers took the bulk with light "sorts" at $8.00@8.25. Aged sheep and yearlings were scarce and unchanged, while most of the feeding lambs sold to packers for slaughter at $6.00.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 9,000 cattle, 13,000 hogs and 9,000 sheep, against 10,015 cattle, 13,573 hogs and 5,549 sheep the previous Wednesday, and 6,955 cattle, 21,882 hogs and 11,963 sheep a year ago.

LIGHT LARD OFFERINGS

Light offerings of lard, with packing interests absorbing both lard and bellies, made a stronger market yesterday, despite the weakness in grains. Hog values were also stronger part of the day and Liverpool lard was up 3d. At the close the principal months were 2½@7½c higher and the other months 2½@5c lower. Bellies were hard to buy and were bid up 25c in a single trade. Pork loins were said to be stronger, although the trade was light. Hog receipts were smaller than a week and a year ago. Exports of lard were 995,000 lbs. and of bacon 703,000 lbs. Prices follow:
